BONN RULES OUT
UNITY DEAL WITH RUSSIA, STANDS
WITH THE WESTVon Brentano Asserts Germans Won't Betray Proven Friends as Price of Unification.

BONN, Dec. 1 (AP)—Chancellor Adenauer's government stood solidly today with the Western allies on German reunification policy, ruling out any bilateral German-Russian negotiations on the subject.

Foreign Minister Heinrich von Brentano made the government's first declaration in Parliament on foreign policy since the Big Four foreign ministers' meeting in Geneva failed to resolve the problem of German unity.

He told cheering members of the Bundestag, lower house of Parliament, that the German people are not prepared to strike any deal (with the Russians) jeopardizing their freedom.

The foreign minister acknowledged the Moscow agreement for West Germany and Russia to exchange diplomatic relations, but he added it was up to the Kremlin to make relations between the two peoples anything more than a technicality.

"No Normal Relations."

"As long as the Soviet Union proceeds on the assumption of the partition of Germany and the existence of two German states," he declared, "there can be no normal relations between our two countries."

Von Brentano declared that "the fate of the German people would be sealed if it tried to exchange the confidence and friendship of its allies for the sympathy of the Soviet Union. Nor will the German people be induced by any threat or temptation to veer from this straight course."

He insisted that Germany can fulfill its tasks only if it is free to make its own decisions. He added that any "compulsory neutralization or isolation from any alliances" such as the Russians demand "would be the worst road for us to choose or into which to force us."

He stressed that inclusion of a reunited Germany within the European and Atlantic communities "offers the safest guarantee that she will never misuse her political and economic forces."

"Belong to Free World."

"The (West German) federal republic and a reunited Germany both belong to the free world indissolubly," he asserted, "and they will neither permit themselves to be pulled out of this community nor will they separate themselves voluntarily from it."

Von Brentano repeated that the Bonn government will decline "even covertly or indirectly" to recognize the Communist East German regime. He said this regime "comes close to a system of slavery."

"There exists one and only one genuine and convincing form of all-German talks, namely free elections," he said. "Their result would prove to the entire world that the German nation in all its parts pledges itself to the cause of democracy, freedom and co-operation."

Red Pact With Nazis.

Referring directly to Soviet Foreign Minister V. M. Molotov, Von Brentano said:

"He once managed to sign a treaty with Hitler and Von Ribbentrop and thus seal an alliance between two totalitarianism."

WITH SAFE-DRIVING DAY
MORE THAN HALF OVER

CHICAGO, Dec. 1 (AP).

WITH Safe-Driving day more than half over, deaths from traffic accidents over the nation stood at 15 today.

Ohio had four fatalities, Indiana, Louisiana and Michigan, two each, and Missouri, Illinois, Kansas, Minnesota and New York one each.

Verlie Reeves of Hartsville was the Missouri fatality.

The one-day effort is being made to show that casualties can be cut down if everyone makes an extra effort every day, like today.

The Associated Press made a survey on Thursday, Nov. 17, a comparable day, and found that 69 persons were killed on the highways.

WEST DECLARES
RULE STILL VALIDNotes Make Plain Allies Will Resist Effort to Shift Authority to German Reds.

BERLIN, Dec. 1 (UP)—The ambassadors of the United States, Britain and France handed separate "hands off Berlin" notes to Soviet Ambassador G. M. Puzhkin tonight.

The three Western envoys made it clear that their governments will resist any Soviet attempt to end four-power control and turn the city over to the East German Communists.

The Russians had indicated previously that East Berlin's fate was the sole concern of the East German Communist regime and not of Russia itself. The three notes were similar, but not identical. The Western nations had co-ordinated their action beforehand, and had kept the West German government at Bonn informed of their plans.

U. S. Note Strongest.

The note from the United States was the strongest. Ambassador James B. Conant came to Berlin from Bonn earlier in the day to deliver the American note to Puzhkin.

In it he rejected the view set forth by Maj. Gen. P. A. Dierbois, Soviet commandant in Berlin, that East Berlin no longer was an occupied area, and the Western powers would have to respect East German law.

Conant said this was "wholly inconsistent with the quadripartite (four-power) status of Berlin."

He said the United States would continue to hold Russia responsible for the welfare and proper treatment of all United States citizens in East Berlin.

Conant also renewed the protest against the treatment of two American congressmen.

He said the United States must again protest "against interference with the freedom of Allied circulation in Berlin and the grossly discourteous and threatening conduct displayed towards persons acting under Soviet authority and control. I do not consider the attempted justification of this incident to be acceptable."

Berlin Claimed As Capital.

The East German Communists laid formal claim today to Berlin as their capital, and said that from now on the Western powers must follow Communist orders in East Berlin.

Some American officials suspect that the East German claims to full authority in Berlin may be the prelude to a new Communist attempt to blockade the German metropolis, which lies some 100 miles inside the Soviet zone of Germany. The West border one such blockade in 1948 with an airlift.

The Communist threats brought a plea from West Berlin Mayor Otto Suhr to Conant for a renewed Allied pledge to defend the divided city's four-power status.

"The German democratic (Communist) republic is a sovereign state and Berlin is its capital," Bruno Baum, secretary of the East Berlin Communist party, told a Communist meeting.

"We shall not permit the Americans to drive about in radio cars in the democratic (Communist) sector of Berlin," he said. "They have no right to do that."

In Berlin, Baum said, "it is

PRESIDENT TO DO

IN '56 CAMPAIGNTells National Commit-

'Splendid Record' — Says Economy Must
Expand Further.By GEORGE H. HALL
A Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

CHICAGO, Dec. 1—President Eisenhower said today he would do everything in his power to help inform the country next year of the achievements of his Administration.

In a message read to the Republican National Committee in session here, the President declared:

"You have a splendid record to submit to the voters in 1956. I personally am proud of Republican achievements for the peace and prosperity and the security of the American people. I shall do everything in my power next year to help you report the record accurately and fully to the country."

The President's message contained no hint as to whether he will seek a second term, a subject that has been of absorbing interest to the committee members gathered to perfect plans for the national convention in San Francisco in August.

Little Encouragement.

It had been assumed that if the President does not run he will assist the party's candidates by making television speeches from time to time. What he said today in a telegram from his Gettysburg (Pa.) headquarters gave little encouragement to the committee optimists who are publicly expressing the hope Mr. Eisenhower will again be a candidate, but it did not foreclose the possibility, either.

There will no doubt be speculation on the President's exact meaning because of the intense desire of the politicians, Democrats as well as Republicans, to know who is to head the 1956 Republican ticket.

Although the Republican party has demonstrated fidelity to its campaign pledges, Mr. Eisenhower said, "we must not stand still, absorbed in the contemplation of what we have done."

"Continued progress in the healthy expansion of our economy," he went on, "even more equitable sharing of the productivity of that economy, rising levels of health, education and welfare for all, must remain our goals."

Proposals Worthy of Vote.

"In striving toward these goals you, and Republican candidates everywhere, will be motivated by a common conviction in the imperishable principles of the American system," he continued. "So inspired, you will present to the American people both a record of brilliant accomplishment and specific proposals and plans for the future that are worthy of their acclaim and vote."

Whether the President will run for a second term has been the main point of interest at the National Committee's two-day meeting, which ends today.

An encouraging report by National Chairman Leonard W. Hall again the President's health was received with cheers at a dinner last night. Hall told reporters yesterday he thought Eisenhower might not make up his mind as to whether he would be able to run, until late February or early March.

Cabinet Members Report.

Henry Cabot Lodge Jr., United States ambassador to the United Nations, gave the committee a resume of the country's foreign affairs last night, and today Secretary of Agriculture Ezra Taft Benson, Secretary of Commerce Sinclair Weeks and Secretary of Labor James P. Mitchell spoke on their respective fields.

In his speech, Benson promised again that in January the Administration would make recommendations to Congress along the lines of the six-point program he announced some time ago after conferring with Mr. Eisenhower. He said he could not discuss the recommendations in detail but could give the following "general ideas":

There will be a "soil bank"

A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

CAMP DAVID, Md., Dec. 1—President Eisenhower's top advisers arrived by helicopter and automobile at this closely guarded mountain retreat today for a second full-scale review of defense and foreign policies.

Given new assurance by his doctors that his present level of activity is not harmful, Mr. Eisenhower summoned 23 of his chief foreign affairs, defense and fiscal assistants to the isolated camp for a meeting of the National Security Council.

Although no details of the conference were given out, it was probable a discussion of the military budget for the next fiscal year was on the agenda, as well as major points of the congressional program the Administration is getting ready for the new session.

Second Meeting.

It was Mr. Eisenhower's second meeting with the full National Security Council, the country's chief planning group for cold war strategy, since his Sept. 12 heart attack.

All but one of the five regular members of the council were present. The exception was Vice President Richard M. Nixon, prevented from attending by other official duties.

Also on hand were the civilian heads of the Army, Air Force and Navy, who were seeing the President for the first time since his illness, and members of the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

Their presence stirred speculation that important decisions on defense planning or military spending may be in the works.

However, White House Press Secretary James C. Hagerty has said several times that no emergency situation led to the meeting, pointing out that the NSC regularly meets each Thursday.

Camp David was decided on again this week because Mr. Eisenhower wanted to attend, Hagerty has explained.

President Drives to Camp.

Accompanied by Dillon Anderson, his adviser on national security matters, the president drove the 22 miles from his farm home near Gettysburg to Camp David in 35 minutes.

The first helicopter bringing some of the participants from Washington touched down at 1:50 p.m. in a small clearing which serves as the camp's helicopter landing port.

Other officials, not willing to undergo the noisy, often-bumpy helicopter flight, made the 65-mile trip from the capital by automobile.

Mr. Eisenhower convened the meeting shortly after all 23 participants had arrived. It was scheduled to last two hours, and the President planned to drive back to Gettysburg immediately afterwards.

On the return trip, he was to be accompanied by Attorney General Herbert Brownell Jr., who has some Department of Justice business.

DIVER TRAPPED
130 FEET DOWN
IN FRIGID RIVERSOLOMONS, Md., Dec. 1
(UP)—A Navy diver was trapped 130 feet below the surface of the Patuxent river near here today and officials said "the situation is grave."

The diver, trapped when his life-line fouled on an old ship's anchor, messaged rescuers two hours later that his morale was "just fine."

Four hours later officials reported that he was "beginning to feel" the severe cold of the water.

Fellow divers fought dangerous rip tides, rough water and cold to free the man. But after repeated failures over a four-hour period, the Navy said the situation appeared "grave." Officials said, however, that there have been similar cases in which divers have survived as much as 72 hours at more than 100 feet below the surface.

These officials said the rescuers hope to raise the diver to the surface along with the anchor to which he is tied. Then he will be rushed into a decompression chamber to protect him from the crippling condition known as the bends. This often follows a too rapid ascent to the surface.

FAURE'S OUSTER
FROM HIS PARTY IS ORDERED OVER
FORCED ELECTIONMendes-France Leads Radical Socialists Against Premier Who Decided to Dissolve Assembly.

PARIS, Dec. 1 (UP)—The steering committee of the Radical Socialist party ordered Premier Faure expelled from the party tonight in retaliation for his decision to disband the National Assembly and force a general election.

The ouster move was led by former Premier Pierre Mendes-France, former close friend and colleague of Faure but now his bitter political enemy.

Prodded by Mendes-France, the Radical Socialist steering committee called Faure on the carpet for discipline and then voted, 19 to 8, to throw him out of the party. The expulsion will become effective when it is approved by the full executive committee.

Censure Vote Planned.

The expulsion coincided with a move in Parliament to oust Faure from the premiership through a vote of censure. He threatened to dissolve Parliament immediately if it started any such move.

These developments followed a vote of no confidence in Faure early this week.

Although the Premier's ouster from his party was calculated to give Faure a political black eye, it was not expected to halt the elections. Neither does it affect his status as premier.

It was the hottest squabble in French politics in nearly 30 years. Five Radical Socialist members of Faure's cabinet announced they were resigning in protest against the Premier's actions.

Faure refused to accept the resignations immediately. Informed sources said he would confer with President Rene Coty on what to do about the unprecedented situation.

Faure also prepared to call an urgent session of the Cabinet to study the political situation that left the average French voter baffled.

Five Resign.

The five Radical Socialist members of the Cabinet who resigned are Maurice Bourges-Maunoury, minister of the Interior; Andre Morice, minister of industry and commerce; Senator Jean Berthouin, minister of education; Henri Laforest, minister of state for defense, and Gilbert Jules, secretary of state for finance.

By the Associated Press.

Meanwhile, the Socialists and backers of Mendes-France lost no time in getting under way their drive for votes in the nation-wide election, expected to be set for Jan. 28.

The cabinet decision to dissolve the assembly—the first move in the postwar Fourth Republic—gives Faure the early election the Assembly, has denied him.

The 318-218 no-confidence vote permitted use of a clause in the 1946 constitution providing for dissolution of the Assembly by the cabinet if two governments were defeated on votes of confidence by a majority of all members of the house within an 18-month period.

Mendes-France received a no-confidence vote last February, with more than half the deputies against him.

Mendes-France, who is in the process of reorganizing and tightening his grip on the Radical Socialist party, wanted the elections delayed to give him time to regroup.

SLAPS WRONG MAN ON BACK, HE'S A BANK ROBBER

WEST COVINA, Calif., Dec. 1 (AP)—John H. Wallace in a friendly man but that quality almost boomeranged on him yesterday.

Wallace entered a bank yesterday during a holdup. He mistook a man holding a machine gun for a friend, walked up behind him and slapped him on the back.

It was the wrong thing to do, at least at that moment. The man whirled at Wallace and ordered him behind a counter, where four women tellers and several customers were huddled.

The man was wearing a halloosen mask and rubber gloves. So was a confederate, who carried a pistol while he scooped up bills from tellers' cages. The two men stole $16,000.

PRESIDENT ALONE MUST DECIDE ON
'56, DOCTOR SAYS

GASTONIA, N. C., Dec. 1 (AP)—President Eisenhower will have to make his own decision about seeking a second term, Dr. Paul Dudley White declared yesterday.

The Boston heart specialist who has attended the President during his recent illness said Mr. Eisenhower's political future is something that he alone must decide.

"If he runs, I'll vote for him," White said in an interview. "White was here to make two addresses at a medical symposium."

White said Mr. Eisenhower has made good progress, and that he intends to give the President another checkup in about two weeks.

The scar has healed, White said, and it now is a question of the rest of the heart adjusting. He said Mr. Eisenhower's is an "average case, and he is responding like the average patient."

HEAT WAVE IN BRAZIL

RIO DE JANEIRO, Dec. 1 (UP)—The season's first pre-summer heat wave rolled across southern Brazil today, driving temperatures up to 97 degrees in Rio de Janeiro and to 100.5 in Porto Alegre.

It was one of the worst November heat waves in recent years although such temperatures are not unusual in the summer period of January here below the Equator where the seasons are reversed.

Communist Boss in Bad for Being
Mixed Up in Kidnaping of Bride

MOSCOW, Dec. 1 (AP)—Komsomolskaya Pravda, the Soviet youth paper, says the kidnaping of brides is a survival of feudalism and must be stopped.

It revealed the practice persists in Soviet Kirghizia, in central Asia, and told of one Communist district secretary who was mixed up in such an incident.

Somewhat ominously it declared he did not "take Soviet law into consideration."

In the past year, said a report from Dzhalsal-Abad in the Kirghiz republic, 20 young girls have become more or less unwilling brides.

Komsomolskaya Pravda gave this account of one such case: "The sixth grade schoolgirl Gulbar Dzholdoshbayeva was on her way home when the thunder of beating hooves reached her ears."

"Gulbar moved aside, but strong arms lifted her from the ground and swung her across

THE GOVERNMENT
ALLEGED IN TRUE
BILL VOTED HERENamed as Co-Conspirators
Are Ellis N. Slack, Shoe Broker
Irving Sachs and Firm He Heads.

(Related Story on Page 2A)

Matthew J. Connelly, who was appointments secretary to former President Truman, and Theron Lamar Caudle, former head of the Justice Department's tax division, were indicted here today on a charge of conspiracy to defraud the Government.

Harry I. Schwimmer, Kansas City attorney, named in a perjury indictment Nov. 18, was indicted jointly with Caudle and Connelly today.

Named as co-conspirators were Ellis N. Slack, former assistant attorney general in the tax division; Irving Sachs, head of Shu-Stiles, Inc., shoe brokerage firm, and the Shu-Stiles firm.

Slack has been relieved of duty as a trial attorney in the Justice Department, it was announced in Washington.

It was charged that Connelly was paid $1,650 in January 1952 by Schwimmer, who was defense counsel for Sachs. While there was no allegation that Caudle received cash, "influenced by the hope of reward and personal gain, would recommend that prosecution (of Sachs) be declined."

The alleged conspiracy was in connection with delays in the prosecution of the Sachs income tax case.

Bond for Schwimmer was fixed at $30,000, to cover both indictments against him. Bond for Caudle and Connelly was set at $50,000 each. To account for the higher bond for Schwimmer, it was explained that he now lives in Puerto Rico, and "many persons have strong motives against his appearance in court."

The indictments, returned to United States District Judge George H. Moore, charged that Connelly, Caudle and Schwimmer "willfully, knowingly and unlawfully conspired and agreed with Irving Sachs to defraud the Government."

The defendants were charged with conspiring to commit five violations of the United States Code—bribery, perjury, "many false statements and entries, and violations of the corrupt practices act and the internal revenue laws."

The charge is a single count indictment with a maximum penalty of conviction of five years in prison and a $10,000 fine.

By their actions, the indictment said, the defendants conspired to defraud the Government of its "function and right to administer the internal revenue laws of the United States and regulations thereto, free from unlawful impairment and obstruction, and free from corruption, improper influence, dishonesty and fraud," the indictment said.

Further Charges.

Actions of the defendants were a conspiracy to make it impossible for the Government to "fairly, honestly and free of fraud, deceit, partiality, concealment, interference, obstruction and corruption," make dispositions in business matters affecting Caudle's and Connelly's offices, the indictment alleged.

By virtue of the defendants' "personal and pecuniary interests in the success of persons concerned and affected by the outcome" of Government decisions in matters pending before the tax division or the appointments secretary's office, the indictment said, they conspired to defraud the Government of its right to make "conscientious, faithful, disinterested and unbiased judgments."

Announced Here and in Capital.

The indictments were announced simultaneously here and in Washington, where J. Fred Mullen, press officer for the Department of Justice, said this was not the end of the investigation.

The grand jury will continue," he added.

In response to questions, Mullen said the St. Louis investigation

SCHOOL PARLEY SHOWS SUPPORT OF FEDERAL AID FOR BUILDINGS

Semifinal Reports Reflect Nearly Even Split on Using U.S. Money for Operating Schools.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 1 (AP)—The White House Conference on Education appeared almost certain today to go strongly on record in favor of federal aid to schools, particularly for buildings.

Discussion table chairmen, sitting in two coffee-gulping teams of eight until 2 a.m., simmered down the views of 166 round tables which had discussed school finance during the evening. Each of the two teams designated one of its members to refine the findings further for final presentation to the conference tonight.

Team Reports.
Team No. 1 reported: 1. More than 2-to-1 sentiment among participants at 83 round-table discussions in favor of some increase in federal aid.

2. A large majority in favor of construction aid.

3. A narrow majority opposing federal aid for school operation, which would include purchase of textbooks and teachers' pay.

Team No. 2 reported: 1. More than 70 per cent of participants at the other 83 round tables in favor of some increase in federal aid, with a small minority opposed to federal aid for education in any form.

2. Almost all tables, as distinguished from participants, in favor of some federal aid for construction.

3. A substantial but smaller majority of tables in favor of some aid for current expense operation.

Thus federal aid for school house building was strongly popular but there was about an even split on aid for operation.

Views on Needy States.
Tables represented on team No. 1 reported a predominant view that all states should be eligible for federal aid but that provision should be made to insure that the money would be distributed within the states to the poorest school districts first.

Team No. 2 found about an even division on whether federal money should go only to needy states. There are about 1800 participants among the 2000 at the conference.

Both teams reported sentiment to insure against federal control of educational policies.

Team No. 2 found general agreement that any new federal money should be administered by the federal Office of Education and channeled through state educational agencies, rather than directly to localities.

Reports by the two teams did not jibe in all cases as to the fields covered and the basis of approach. Such discrepancies presumably will be smoothed out in preparation of the final report.

Teacher Shortage Cited.
The conference called on the American public to remember that there is a tremendous shortage of teachers who "work with our most precious resource—our children."

The report listed three things: 1. Teaching must have prestige comparable to other professions.

2. The salaries must be high enough to keep teachers in the classroom and not permit them to be lured to other fields where the pay is better.

3. The teachers' job must be presented in such a way so it will attract talented people to the profession.

The conference also came up with this definition of what it is looking for in the nation's classrooms: "A good teacher is one who has an active interest in children and youths; has a broad educational background; is professionally qualified and competent; possesses good physical and mental health; has a good moral character; manifests a desire for self-improvement; can work constructively with other professional workers, parents and the community; and is proud of teaching as a profession."

400,000 Rooms Needed.
The apparent status of federal building aid came as no great surprise. A report yesterday on building needs said something had to be done to provide nearly 400,000 classrooms in the next five years.

Government assistance for school operation with its more obvious connection with teachers and books, had not been spoken of so favorably by conferees.

A report on building needs, to which no delegate rose in protest, said "no state has demonstrated a financial incapacity" to meet these needs but that it is "virtually impossible" anyway for them to get the necessary school building done within five years.

This report was drafted by Earl H. Beling, consultant engineer from Moline, Ill., and Elmer W. Rowley, dean of Joplin (Mo.) Junior College.

"It appears that under present plans," the report said, "only two or three states have been quoted as stating that they can meet their building needs for the next five years."

And, it added, "under the present plans and time limitations stipulated it seems to be virtually impossible for most of the states to meet school building needs."

Caudle and Connelly Held Powerful Positions In Former President Truman's Administration

Indictment Stems From Inquiry Former Justice Official Tried to Block.

Theron Lamar Caudle and Matthew J. Connelly, named today in criminal indictments returned by the United States grand jury here, held powerful posts in the Administration of former President Harry S. Truman.

For Caudle the indictment is particularly ironic, the charge against him stemming from an investigation which he, as Assistant United States Attorney General in charge of income tax prosecutions, sought to block five years ago—on behalf of others.

It was Caudle who also tried to interfere with the St. Louis Federal grand jury investigation of tax fixing in the office of former collector of Internal Revenue.

Caudle refused to authorize the late Drake Watson, then United States Attorney, to assist the grand jury and demanded that United States District Judge George H. Moore furnish a list of cases "so they could be expedited through channels."

Full Investigation.
Judge Moore, who refused to be hamstrung by the Justice Department, later told the Post-Dispatch of his insistence on obtaining a full investigation of reported fixing and corruption, despite the opposition of Caudle and Attorney General J. Howard McGrath.

In a blistering charge to the grand jury, Judge Moore called for a sweeping investigation of the Internal Revenue Bureau.

The jury was instructed to reach into the very vitals of the pattern which corrupts public officials for the benefit of the few and the enrichment of their representatives.

There were letters and telephone calls between Watson and Caudle on Judge Moore's demands for a thorough inquiry. In one conversation, Watson remarked to Caudle: "I'm between the devil and the deep blue sea. The judge is directing me to go ahead and you are ordering me not to."

Judge Moore wrote his instructions to the grand jury and advised Watson to so inform the Justice Department. Watson reported back that he had "received the signal" from Caudle's office. The investigation was to go ahead, with the assistance of Thomas DeWolfe, assistant Attorney General. Finnegan finally was indicted for misconduct in office, convicted and sentenced to prison for two years.

Inquiry Called Off.
It was Caudle too, who called off an FBI inquiry into the 1946 Kansas City vote frauds after only six persons had been interviewed. Although the FBI was ordered by the Justice Department to make a limited investigation, Caudle wrote a letter saying the agents had made "lengthy and detailed investigations."

The letter was in reply to a query by then United States Senator James P. Kem, who wanted to know why the Justice Department had not begun an investigation immediately following the election, when the fraud charges were originally made. At that time Caudle was head of the criminal division of the Justice Department. Later he was shifted to chief of the tax division. He was fired by former President Truman, for outside active fees "incompatible" with his post.

Following the delay in the Kansas City inquiry, the FBI finally was given free rein to conduct a full investigation. Investigators were handicapped by that time by the loss of the principal evidence, the ballots which had been stolen from the Jackson County courthouse. Prosecution of almost all the election law violators collapsed because of the theft of the ballots, which remains unsolved to this day.

Caudle has been described

variously as "a country boy dazzled by city slickers" and as "an honorably motivated man, despite obvious shortcomings."

He was born in Wadesboro, N.C., 51 years ago, and attended Wake Forest College, where he received a law degree in 1928. Handsome and personable, he easily fitted into North Carolina politics. He became county prosecutor and later United States Attorney for the western district of North Carolina. It was from the latter post that he went to Washington and into the Justice Department.

Following his dismissal in Washington, in which he regarded himself as "a fall guy" for others in the department, Caudle returned to his native Wadesboro (pop. 3500), and still practices law there. He is the father of four children.

"Country Boy."
In support of the "country boy" appraisal of Caudle, he has displayed an artlessness in his many appearances before congressional committees inquiring into tax matters. He talks freely, calls mere acquaintances "partner" and proved to be a veritable gold mine of new leads for the House Judiciary (Chief) committee in its inquiry into the Justice Department.

Six of seven members of the committee described him as "honorably motivated." The six committee members also concluded that he had been used unfairly "as a public sacrifice to divert attention from departmental weaknesses for which others were responsible."

Admissions made by Caudle to Post-Dispatch reporters or in committee testimony, included the following matters:

Caudle, while he was an Assistant United States Attorney General speculated in oil with Frank Nathan, Pittsburgh gambler, against whom a sugar black market charge was dropped by the Government with Caudle's approval. Caudle said he invested $1000 in a lease on which eight wells were drilled. When things failed to develop as expected, Robert Fletcher, a Dallas (Tex.) oil man and gambler, arranged for Caudle to receive $150 a month, although his actual income from oil was as little as $22 monthly.

A $5000 commission was collected by Caudle on the sale of an airplane to Larry Knohl, an investigator for two men under indictment in New York on tax fraud charges. Caudle said he accepted the commission with the knowledge of Attorney General McGrath, whom he quoted as saying, "You have a large family and need the money."

Caudle admitted to the Post-Dispatch that he was a stock broker in the unprofitable years 1930-33. He joined the Federal Emergency Relief Administration at Boston in 1935, launching his career in Government service.

This was followed by service as an investigator for the WPA and for House and Senate committees until 1945, when he became executive secretary to the Vice President. One committee for which he worked was headed by Senator Harry S. Truman.

When Vice President Truman moved up, following the death of President Roosevelt, Connelly became the President's appointments secretary.

As chief investigator for the Truman Senate Committee on Defense Spending, Connelly, with Harry V. Vaughan, who later became presidential military aide, conducted hearings at the Federal building here in 1941 on reports of shake-downs by union officers in connection with employment on defense projects.

Connelly, tall, trim and athletic, has been termed the "practical politician type," although he has never run for an important public office. As appointments secretary to the President, it was part of his job tactfully to screen all individuals who wanted to take up Mr. Truman's time.

Praised by Truman.
When introducing Connelly, a Catholic, to a group of Masons calling at the White House in 1952, Mr. Truman praised his secretary in this fashion: "He does a remarkable job. He can make you Masons believe he is one of you, and he can make the Knights of Columbus think he belongs to their order. Matt knows how to treat them all, and whether to let them in or not."

In 1951 Columnist Drew Pearson wrote that "one interesting thing about the charming Matt Connelly is that he has done some of the same wire-pulling that others are being condemned for." The story went on to say that Connelly assisted Pan-American and American Overseas airlines to combine, largely because of personal interest in an airline vice presidency.

When President Truman left office, Connelly flew out to Kansas City to assist the former President in setting up an office there. Connelly then opened an office of his own in New York as consultant on business and government contracts.

When Caudle's name was reported to have been used in connection with an attempted $500,000 shake-down of Abraham Teitelbaum, Chicago attorney, Caudle told a House Ways and Means subcommittee he telephoned Frank Nathan in Florida and told him "to quit using my name." Caudle added that he was "enraged" by the report his name had been used.

Asked by a Post-Dispatch reporter if he received $4000 in connection with the case of Irving Sachs, St. Louis wholesale shoe firm head who pleaded guilty of income tax evasion in 1951, Caudle replied, "I did not receive a single dime, or anything else."

Appointments Secretary Called 'Practical Politician Type,' 'Wire Puller.'

Fordham University, New York, and became a stock broker in the unprofitable years 1930-33. He joined the Federal Emergency Relief Administration at Boston in 1935, launching his career in Government service.

This was followed by service as an investigator for the WPA and for House and Senate committees until 1945, when he became executive secretary to the Vice President. One committee for which he worked was headed by Senator Harry S. Truman.

When Vice President Truman moved up, following the death of President Roosevelt, Connelly became the President's appointments secretary.

As chief investigator for the Truman Senate Committee on Defense Spending, Connelly, with Harry V. Vaughan, who later became presidential military aide, conducted hearings at the Federal building here in 1941 on reports of shake-downs by union officers in connection with employment on defense projects.

Connelly, tall, trim and athletic, has been termed the "practical politician type," although he has never run for an important public office. As appointments secretary to the President, it was part of his job tactfully to screen all individuals who wanted to take up Mr. Truman's time.

Praised by Truman.
When introducing Connelly, a Catholic, to a group of Masons calling at the White House in 1952, Mr. Truman praised his secretary in this fashion: "He does a remarkable job. He can make you Masons believe he is one of you, and he can make the Knights of Columbus think he belongs to their order. Matt knows how to treat them all, and whether to let them in or not."

In 1951 Columnist Drew Pearson wrote that "one interesting thing about the charming Matt Connelly is that he has done some of the same wire-pulling that others are being condemned for." MAYORS URGE 40,000-MILE U.S. HIGHWAY SYSTEM

Association Also Asks for Federal Payments on Untaxed Properties in Cities.

MIAMI, Fla., Dec. 1 (AP)—The American Municipal Association representing some 12,000 cities, urged Congress yesterday to pass legislation providing for a 40,000-mile interstate highway system.

The bill should include money for the "highest possible level of construction on the federal-aid primary, secondary and urban systems," the organization said in a resolution.

"The new highway legislation should give fair consideration to the needs of urban and rural highways," the resolution said. "It had originally called for 'equal consideration' for both urban and rural highways, but was amended to urge 'fair consideration.'"

Another resolution called for the Federal Government to make payments to cities on federally-owned property which the city is unable to tax.

The organization noted that "Congress has . . . recognized the necessity of obligating the federal Government to pay same state and local taxes or their equivalent."

The failure to do so, the municipal officers said, "has reduced the tax base of municipalities."

"What is needed is a greatly expanded and permanent program for payments in lieu of taxes," the resolution said.

The organization also urged Congress to provide a plan for insurance against floods and other natural disasters.

"There is no insurance available which will cover losses to our cities from natural disaster," and the cities are not able to pay the "tremendous costs of replacing municipal property," it said.

Mayor Robert J. Wagner of New York was chosen without opposition to be president of the Municipal Association. Mayor Ben West of Nashville was chosen vice president.

President Makes 'S-D Day' Plea For Safety in Traffic Today

He Calls on Americans to Show 'We Can—By Our Own Efforts—Reduce Accidents on Streets, Highways.'

GETTYSBURG, Pa., Dec. 1 (AP)—President Eisenhower has appealed to all Americans to help demonstrate today that "we can—by our own, personal efforts—reduce accidents on our streets and highways."

He called for national observance of today's "S-D Day"—Safe Driving Day—in the following statement: "In the following statement: 'S-D Day'—Safe Driving Day."

"All over the United States, Americans will join in a great national effort to save lives. The occasion will be the second nationwide 'S-D Day'—Safe Driving Day."

"The immediate objective of S-D day is to have 24 hours without a single traffic accident. The long-range, and more important objective is to impress upon all of us the necessity for safe driving and safe walking every day of the year."

"The need is obvious and urgent. Last year, an American man, woman or child was killed in traffic every 15 minutes. Someone was injured every 25 seconds. And, this year, the record is worse. More people are dying, more are injured and crippled."

"We know that we cannot solve the traffic accident problem in one day. But we can—and must—start doing a better job. I appeal, then, to every American to help demonstrate that we can—By our own, personal efforts—Reduce accidents on our streets and highways. Having shown that we can do so on one day, let us all, as good citizens, accept our responsibility for safety every day in the future."

JUNK DRIVE TURNS UP POLICE BADGE MISSING 11 YEARS

Parishioners of Seven Holy Founders Catholic Church, 6741 Rock Hill road, Affton, reported their scrap metal collection an outstanding success yesterday. It even turned up St. Louis police badge 744, which has been missing since Nov. 4, 1944.

The badge belonged to Patrolman Edward Leonard who said it was taken in a burglary of his home.

Leonard, who now lives at 5629 Enright avenue, no longer needs the badge. He retired April 1, 1953.

AFL RATIFIES MERGER, ACTION BY CIO EXPECTED LATER IN DAY

Combined Meeting Due Next Week — Eisenhower to Address Group — Lewis Bills CIO for $1,665,000.

By SPENCER R. McCULLOCH
A staff correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Dec. 1—Separate conventions of the AFL and CIO opened today to ratify agreements to merge the two organizations into a single 15,000,000-member labor body, ending a costly schism of 20 years.

The merger is to be effected at a joint convention next week. This history-making constitutional convention, uniting craft and industrial unions in a single body, is to be addressed by President Eisenhower speaking by direct wire from Gettysburg, Pa., to the convention hall in New York.

The 800 AFL delegates voted unanimously in favor of the merger—providing the CIO also agrees, which argument was expected later in the day.

Preliminary Work Done

Most of the preliminary work for the amalgamation was already accomplished as the AFL and CIO went into their separate sessions today. The powerful AFL executive council, which controls the convention votes, gave final approval yesterday to the constitution for the merged body, details of merger terms, and a plan of implementation.

Similar action was taken the day before by the CIO executive board. Joint committees representing both organizations as well as other executive groups have been working out the unification plan since it was outlined at Miami Beach last Feb. 9 by George Meany, AFL president, who will head the combined movement, and Walter P. Reuther, president of the CIO and head of its United Automobile Workers.

Bill From Mine Workers.
The CIO was confronted with an unexpected bill for $1,665,000 from John L. Lewis, head of the independent United Mine Workers. Payment of such a sum would practically exhaust what remains in the CIO treasury.

Lewis, founder of the CIO but now an outspoken critic of the merger, last night sent John L. Owens, secretary-treasurer of the mine workers, to present the bill personally to James B. Carey, CIO secretary-treasurer. Informal official CIO reaction was, in effect, that funds advanced by Lewis during organizing campaigns were "gifts" rather than loans. Carey in a letter to Lewis said, "the CIO owes you no money."

In a letter of transmittal, Lewis stated that the mine workers had contributed $7,250,000 in CIO organizing campaigns, exclusive of $601,000 advanced and repaid by the steel workers after the "Little Steel" strike and $200,000 to the late Sidney Hillman for textile campaigns.

Balance on Loans.
The $1,665,000, Lewis contended, represents balance due on negotiated loans from the UMW to the CIO.

"You are now in the process of liquidating the Congress of Industrial Organizations," Lewis said, "and we believe that the millions of men and women who are the beneficiaries of the contributions that the United Mine Workers of America have made in order for them to enjoy equal opportunities with the rest of the organized workers in America, will want to honor this valid loan before you dissolve your organization."

Lewis has recalled that his union was "stipulated" out of the AFL-CIO merger talks and declared that the new combined body would be controlled by "a mere handful of men who can perpetuate themselves in office by the support of their affiliated unions."

The 75-year-old Lewis has predicted that the merger would eventually collapse, parting "like the rope of sand that it is."

Carey Reply.
In reply, Carey said, "Why he's got the second-biggest bank in Washington and wants us to help him make it the biggest. Lewis has got three brass balls hanging outside his office..."

"You have achieved," Carey wrote Lewis, "the momentary ripple of publicity which you sought to relieve the boredom of your isolation from the democratic labor movement."

Significance of the merger was expressed in a report today by the AFL executive council at a meeting of the federation's seventy-fourth convention.

"This is an historic convention," the council stated, "designed to usher in a new era in the development of the American trade union movement."

No Time to 'Rake Ashes.'
"At a moment like this nothing is to be gained by raking up the ashes of past differences that led to the split in trade union ranks 20 years ago. We call all men our brothers and declared a convention at the beginning of this century. Let us act in that spirit. Let us achieve unity not only by the adoption of a written constitution but by a spontaneous resurgence of the fraternal spirit that cemented our voluntary organization."

"As practical trade unionists we realize that the proposed merger presents many new responsibilities as well as many new opportunities for progress. Our first responsibility must be to our country. We must so conduct ourselves, both in the formulation and implementation of basic policies as to promote at all times the peace of the world, the security of the free American way of life and its economic and social progress."

The council disclosed in its report that a no-raiding agreement reached in 1954 between the CIO and AFL with unions subscribing to it on a voluntary basis had lessened strife and given impetus to organic unity.

Settlement of Cases.
The council said that 46 of 63 cases under the no-raiding pact had been settled by mutual agreement and others disposed of by impartial umpire. Currently 79 AFL unions and 29 CIO unions are signatories to the agreement. Daye Beck, head of the Teamsters, biggest union in the AFL, is one of the hold-outs and has blocked any proposal to introduce a compulsory no-raiding clause in the merger agreement.

The council said it recognized labor unity may not be fully achieved at the top level. It pointed out it should encompass amalgamation of state and local bodies and whenever possible voluntary integration of unions in the same field.

AFL Membership.
Dues paying membership of unions affiliated with the AFL was announced officially today as 9,615,333, less than the recently released Government statistics but highest in history of the AFL—which had 3,045,347 members prior to expulsion of the unions which formed the Congress of Industrial Organizations.

Roughly, proportionate strength of the AFL and CIO on a basis of membership is about 2 to 1 in favor of the AFL.

The CIO, now holding its last convention, is about to bow out as an entity but its founding principles of industrial unionism have been accepted by the AFL and in some cases embodied in AFL unions. The basic conflict between craft and industrial unionism has ceased to exist. Conflicts of method, of personalities, of political strategy remain in certain instances.

Four Rescued From Sixth Fire In 24 Hours at Rooming House

Mississippi Ave. Neighbor Assists Three From Third Floor—Girl Descends by Ladder.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Melton and their 2-year-old son, Ricky, were helped to safety from a third floor window of a rooming house at 1610 Mississippi avenue today after a fire prevented their descent by the stairs.

Fire Chief Hugh Lyon said an investigation would be made by the police arson squad and the Fire Marshal's office. Tenants reported six fires in the building in the last 24 hours.

"We think someone is setting these fires," Chief Lyon said. Melton was treated at City Hospital for cuts of the right leg and his wife for sprains of both ankles.

They were assisted to the ground by Lloyd Lawson, owner of an automobile repair shop at the rear of 1622 Mississippi, who saw the flames and smoke and heard cries for help.

Lawson scrambled up a slanting wood canopy over a rear door to the second floor level, where he was able to reach the Meltons and their son and help them down.

The Meltons' older daughter, Shelby Jean, 11 years old, was unable to follow her parents because of the smoke, it was reported. However, she reached the front part of the building and descended by a ladder brought by firemen.

A younger daughter, Patsy Melton, 5, was downstairs at the time of the blaze, and left the building with about 24 other children and 20 adults.

The building, which houses

10 families, was the scene of a rescue Nov. 11 of two small children from a blazing room with her three children to drink coffee with another tenant across the hall. She was at a loss to explain how the blaze started.

She said it was the last of six fires that had plagued the tenants in the past 24 hours. Some of the blazes were extinguished by tenants, others by firemen.

There was another fire in the building last Nov. 15 that caused an estimated $75 damage.

In fleeing today's blaze, many of the tenants left before they could put on outer garments. A number of the children were sheltered in the L & M Food Shop at 1626 Mississippi avenue by Mrs. Albert E. Smith, wife of the proprietor.

POLICE CIVILIANS JOIN A UNION DESPITE RULING

Garage, Service Employees, and Some Chauffeurs Organized by Teamsters.

A successful start has been made in a new effort to organize civilian employees of the St. Louis Police Department, despite a rule forbidding them to join a union without permission of the Board of Police Commissioners, the Post-Dispatch learned today.

Garage and service employees and some chauffeurs attended an organization meeting shortly before Thanksgiving and joined Teamsters Local 618. They immediately started wearing lapel buttons to show their membership.

Edwin Dorsey, secretary-treasurer of the local, said 33 men applied and were taken into the union. He said: "We have represented some of these people before, and this is more of a reorganization."

The Police Department has approximately 435 civilian employees, including clerks, guards, maintenance men, janitors, elevator and switchboard operators, matrons and laborers.

Chief of Police Jeremiah O'Connell, saying he had not heard of the organization move, announced pay rises for a large number of the civilian workers today, effective immediately. He said the action had been under consideration for some time by the board, and that it was not an attempt to head off any drive for union membership.

CHRISTMAS TREES HERE DUE TO BE IN SHORT SUPPLY

St. Louisans who want to deck the hall with boughs of holly this Christmas may be out of luck, and Christmas trees will be in short supply by as much as 10 per cent, compared with last year, a check of dealers indicated here today.

Extreme cold weather in the northwest has frozen the holly and cut drastically into shipments of Douglas fir, while Nova Scotia, prime source for balsam, spruce and Scotch pine, is having trouble getting trees out because of heavy snow. Holly is expected to be 80 per cent short here.

Andy Aveleno of Truckers Produce & Tree Co., 1412 North Sixth street, said prices would be up by about 35 cents a tree.

A spokesman for J. Hofert Co., wholesaler at 4030 Chouteau avenue, said deliveries so far had been larger than normal but he foresaw "plenty of difficulty" between now and Dec. 25. The prospect was that some St. Louisans might have to settle for yule logs.

Belts Holdup Man on Chance Pistol Is Not Loaded --- It Isn't Ships' Store Owner Routs 2 Robbers, Tries to Push Them Into Mississippi.

Raymond J. Chouner, who operates a ship supply business on the old sternwheeler Fort Gage, took a chance early today that a revolver a robber pointed at him was not loaded. He got the revolver and the robber's cap, following a scuffle, and recovered $25 the hold-up man's companion had taken from the cash register.

The men, described by Chouner as "a pair of country boys 21 or 22 years old," ran away after Chouner tried to shove them into the Mississippi river from the second deck of the Fort Gage, former Army Engineers' boat moored on the river at the foot of Poplar street, where he operates the St. Louis Fuel & Supply Co., Inc., a service to river craft.

Chouner was alone in his office at 4 a.m. when the robbers entered. One man pointed a revolver at him and ordered, "Stand aside." Chouner stepped away from his cash register, which the second robber emptied.

"I didn't see any cartridges in the cylinder of the revolver, so I took a chance and belted the robber," Chouner told the Post-Dispatch. "Then I hit the second fellow, knocking him into the next office. He dropped the money. The first man hit me on the forehead with the revolver, which bounced out of his hand to the floor. I hit him a few more times, and followed both of them to the deck."

"I tried to push them through the old railing into the river, but the railing held. One of them said, 'Can't you take a joke, we are only kidding.' They ran down stairs and got away."

The 32-caliber revolver, which Chouner turned over to police, was empty.

SLICK STREETS HURT S-D DAY RECORD HERE

Most Accidents Are Minor — 3 Seriously Hurt in County Crash.

Safe-driving day, proclaimed for the second year by President Eisenhower in an attempt to have the nation score at least one death-free day on the highways, was marred by a number of accidents here today as snow turned it into "slick driving day."

Up to 2 p.m. today, a total of 48 accidents, but no serious injuries were reported on city streets. Twenty-two of them occurred between 1 and 2 p.m. when falling snow had made streets treacherous.

Shortly after 2 p.m., three persons were hurt and taken to the County Hospital as a result of a six-car accident on U. S. Highway 66 at Times Beach, in St. Louis county.

Seven other accidents were reported in county areas and suburban municipalities during the first 14 hours of S-D day. All were minor in nature.

At 12:40 p.m. Public Service Co. called out its snow- and ice-fighting equipment. Forty vehicles began the job of spreading salt and cinders on troublesome slick spots on bus and street car routes.

A bad traffic jam developed early this afternoon when automobiles skidded on Twelfth street, between Clark and Chouteau avenues. The State Highway Patrol at Kirkwood reported highways in the greater St. Louis area were becoming generally slick.

Heavy snowfalls were reported in northern and western Missouri and snow and ice made driving hazardous in most of the state.

Weatherman Harry F. Wahlgren warned that tonight would bring more snow mixed with sleet, along with continued freezing temperatures.

A low tomorrow morning near freezing with a high in the afternoon in the upper 30s was predicted. The snow and sleet will probably change to rain tomorrow, Wahlgren said.

A number of communities set up wrecked automobiles on city property to remind motorists today of the consequences of failing to drive safely. In proclaiming Safe Driving day, President Eisenhower pointed out that last year automobile accidents took 36,000 lives.

National Safety Council figures show that nearly 31,000 Americans have been killed in traffic in the first 10 months of this year. Last year, there were no Missouri auto fatalities on S-D day, although there were 51 traffic deaths in the nation.

Caudle, Connelly and Schwimmer Indicted in Tax Scandal Inquiry

den was tied in with an earlier inquiry at Omaha, Neb. He said nothing was going on in Omaha at this time but the present inactivity did not mean the Omaha phase would not be reopened.

Asked whether some individuals might be re-indicted at Omaha, Mullen answered cryptically: "There might be others."

The St. Louis indictments were the result of evidence uncovered within recent weeks.

The indictment said that during the course of the conspiracy, which allegedly continued to the present time, there was pending in the Internal Revenue Service and in the tax division of the Department of Justice an income tax fraud proceeding concerning alleged co-conspirators Irving Sachs and Shu-Stiles, Inc.

Reference to Sachs.

The indictment states that "it was an essential part of the conspiracy that Sachs, having wilfully evaded large amounts of income tax over a period of years, should nevertheless escape indictment and, if indicted, should escape prosecution, and if convicted, should escape imprisonment."

It was charged that Caudle, without reference to the merits of the income tax fraud case pending before him in his official capacity, and "without making an honest and unbiased decision which it was his duty to do . . . but influenced by the hope of reward and personal gain, would persuade and coerce his subordinates in the Tax Division to recommend, and that prosecution be declined and, if persuasion and coercion were unsuccessful, to decline prosecution himself."

It was a further part of the conspiracy, the indictment continued, "that if indictment of Sachs could not be prevented, defendants would make and cause to be made false, fictitious and misleading statements to the United States District Court for the Eastern District of Missouri in order to procure the dismissal of the indictment."

If the conviction of Sachs could not be prevented, the indictment continued, "defendants would make false statements to the Court and its probation service to attempt to influence the Court with respect to the imposition of a sentence."

"It was a part of the conspiracy," the indictment said, "that Schwimmer and co-conspirators Sachs and Shu-Stiles, Inc., would promise, offer and give money and other things of value to Connelly and Caudle, and other persons unknown to the grand jury, with the intent to influence their official decisions and actions on proceedings pending in their offices, and with intent to influence them to commit and allow fraud on the United States and to induce them to act in violation of their lawful duties."

Amounts Not Known.

The grand jury noted in the indictment that the exact amount of money and the nature of the other things of value given to Connelly and Caudle were not known.

Also a part of the conspiracy, the indictment continued, was a plan under which Connelly "without reference to the merits of the income tax fraud investigation and influenced by the promise of reward and personal gain, would use all his power and influence and that of his office to persuade employees of the Internal Revenue Service to recommend against the criminal prosecution of Sachs and Shu-Stiles, Inc."

Connelly also was to use his power to persuade Caudle and other employees of the tax division to decline criminal prosecution, the indictment said.

It was charged that the defendants, aware that investigations of the subject matter of the conspiracy would be made by many agencies, made every effort to conceal the conspiracy and in doing so were guilty of furthering the original conspiracy.

The extensive grand jury inquiry included an investigation of oil royalties purchased for Connelly and Caudle. Schwimmer paid for both royalties, the evidence showed.

Profit for Connelly Reported.

Caudle said he returned dividend checks and the deed to oil property to Schwimmer, and reprimanded the attorney for buying the royalty. Connelly was reported to have kept his oil investment a year, then sold at a substantial profit.

In addition to the oil deal, Connelly is alleged to have received a check for $1650 from Schwimmer several months after Sachs pleaded guilty and was fined, but escaped going to prison.

Government attorneys told reporters Slack and Sachs were designated co-conspirators, and not defendants, because they "are part of a small agreement, which is part of a larger conspiracy." The attorneys indicated the investigation of the larger conspiracy would continue.

Following the hearing on bond for the defendants, Judge Moore disqualified himself from further connection with the indictment. It also was announced that the grand jury would recess for at least 10 days.

Special Assistant Attorney General Wyllys S. Newcomb informed the court that the evidence on which the indictment was returned was "part of a pattern."

"There was bribery in our Government close to the top," Newcomb stated. He asked that the case be set for trial as soon as is consistent with the rights of the defendants, and added that the grand jury would pro-

Sachs and Shu-Stiles issued and caused to be issued to Defendant Schwimmer a check in the amount of $2500.

No Comment by Truman.

Truman, who was in St. Louis today, declined to comment on the indictments. When reporters asked him if he had anything to say on the grand jury's action, he replied tersely: "No comment."

Slack was appointed to the tax division in 1934. After military leave he returned to the same position in 1946 and served until July, 1948, when he was named an assistant to the attorney general in the tax division, one of the top jobs in the section. After the tax scandal revelations of 1952 and 1953 he became a trial attorney in the tax division.

It was Slack who reported back to Washington, concerning the complaint of Judge Moore of irregularities in the collector's office, that "there was some smoke but no fire."

The jury began its lengthy investigation with an inquiry into efforts by former high officials to whitewash the official conduct of former Collector of Internal Revenue James P. Finnegan here. More recently, the jury has been seeking to learn whether politically influential lawyers were able to block prosecution of income tax violators.

Comment by Caudle's Ex-Aid.

Turner L. Smith, who was first assistant to Caudle in the Justice Department's tax division, told the Post-Dispatch today he would have withheld a recommendation in the Sachs case, had he known that Caudle had received an oil royalty from Sachs' attorney.

"I had no knowledge of Caudle's oil royalty until I came here this week as a grand jury witness and read about the transaction in the newspapers," Smith, a Georgia attorney, told a reporter. He had recommended there be no prosecution of Sachs, who eventually pleaded guilty and was fined $40,000 in 1951.

Caudle told reporters he received a $750 oil royalty from Schwimmer in exchange for a stock market tip. He said the oil deal was made without his knowledge, in 1951, and was terminated by him as soon as he learned of it.

Smith, a grand jury witness yesterday, said he had originally recommended in 1950 that Sachs be prosecuted, after studying investigators' reports, but changed the recommendation "on the basis of medical reports." Sachs is an epileptic, and Schwimmer had argued that the excitement of a trial, that a trial or prison sentence, might prove fatal.

"I would not have made any recommendation if I had thought anything was wrong," Smith observed. "If I had heard about the oil royalty there would have been no recommendation." Smith added that he "received nothing, and I told the grand jury that."

The maximum $10,000 on each of four counts of an indictment, was a grand jury witness yesterday. When passing sentence on Sachs, president of Shu-Stiles, Inc., in November 1951, Judge Harper called the case "one of the most vicious ever brought to my attention." Sachs charged with evading $128,721 in income taxes in the war years 1942-45. Was spared a prison sentence because of his health.

Schwimmer, who was indicted on a charge of perjury Nov. 18, following testimony before the grand jury, yesterday filed suit for a restraining order to keep from the grand jury certain records of his and of Chris Rhodes, a Tulsa (Okla.) attorney. The petition contends the records are protected by attorney-client privilege, and that he has not waived that privilege. His plea probably will be acted on today.

Rhodes, a grand jury witness, is reported to have obtained oil royalties for Schwimmer about the time the Sachs case was dragging on. Records of Schwimmer, obtained from a Kansas City warehouse, have been studied by the jury.

The grand jury charged that Schwimmer's testimony relative to $10,000 given him by Sachs was false. He testified the money represented a legal fee, but the jury termed it a fund to bribe and corrupt public officials.

UNION PACIFIC TO SPEND $38,000,000 ON ENGINES

OMAHA, Dec. 1 (AP)—The Union Pacific Railroad announced yesterday it has ordered fifteen 8500-horsepower gas turbine-electric locomotives from General Electric Co., and plans to order 30 more for a total expenditure of $38,000,000. Arthur E. Stoddard, president of the road said, "these will be the most powerful internally-powered units in railroad motive power, comparing with Union Pacific's present fleet of 25 turbine-electric locomotives of 4500 horsepower each. Geared for freight service the new locomotives will have a top speed of 65 miles per hour and will weigh 408 tons on 12 axles. The overall length of the two-section locomotives with fuel tender will be 165 feet 8½ inches.

MARQUETTE ANNIVERSARY CITED AS GOOD EXAMPLE

MILWAUKEE (UP)—Marquette University's year-long seventy-fifth anniversary celebration has drawn the attention of other universities and colleges as a means of demonstrating a school's value to a community.

Marquette's 1955 program, with its 28 public events, was outlined here recently at the forty-first annual meeting of the Association of Urban Universities. Some 75 college presidents attended.

A Marquette spokesman urged other universities, mostly located in metropolitan areas such as Milwaukee, to promote similar programs in an effort to create mutual understanding between the schools and communities.

COLORADO LEGISLATOR PAYS FOR WIFE'S ERROR

DENVER (INS)—Colorado State Representative Fred I. McLaughlin, a law-observant motorist, couldn't understand it when Denver police padlocked his car at the Colorado state capitol.

The Representative went down to police headquarters, protesting that he never in his life had been ticketed for a traffic violation.

Police produced a citation showing that McLaughlin's wife Katherine had failed to pay $13 in fines for running a red light nearly a year ago.

ST. LOUIS POST-DISPATCH VICTIM RECOGNIZES YOUTH; HE, ANOTHER ADMIT HOLDUP

Two 17-year-old youths, arrested after one of them was recognized by William Rappley, a grocer, in an attempted hold-up Monday, have admitted the robbery attempt and also a previous burglary of Rappley's store at 2122 North Ninth street, police announced today.

They identified themselves as Elvis Paul Knight, living in the 7100 block of Michigan avenue, and Theodore J. Kramer, 900 block of Lemay Ferry road. Kramer turned over to St. Louis county police a small caliber revolver which he said was used in the robbery attempt, police reported.

Knight, who was carrying the revolver, wore a towel over his face when he and Kramer entered the store, Rappley said, but Rappley recognized him anyway. The youths were frustrated when the grocer refused to hand them money, turning and walking toward the back of the store. A 14-year-old girl was implicated by the youths in the burglary, which occurred Oct. 20. A total of $35 and seven cartons of cigarettes was taken.

FRIENDS QUERIED IN SEARCH FOR MISSING COUPLE

Hint Sought to Disappearance of Pair
From Bloody, Bullet-Marked Home.

St. Clair county authorities turned to friends of Mr. and Mrs. Harold A. Smith today in their search for an explanation of the mysterious disappearance of the Smiths from their home at Lebanon, in which bullet holes and many bloodstains were found Tuesday.

A thorough search of the vicinity for several miles around the Smith home has continued day and night since the Smiths were first missed, but no trace of them has been found by deputy sheriffs and Illinois state police.

Four persons were held for questioning at the St. Clair county jail at Belleville, but officers conceded that there was nothing definite to show they had any connection with the case.

They were arrested after some children living south of Lebanon reported seeing a prowler with a small pistol in his hand at their home Sunday night. That night five shots are believed to have been fired at the Smith home, one mile east of Lebanon.

Chief Deputy Sheriff Clifford C. Flood asked Mrs. Smith's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Dressel, and Smith's mother, Mrs. William Reck, to come to his office today and give the names of friends and acquaintances who might throw some light on the puzzle. The Dressels live on a farm north of Lebanon and Mrs. Reck lives at Belleville.

Flood said authorities were considering asking the Federal Bureau of Investigation to enter the case on the theory that the attackers of the Smiths have now left Illinois.

Flood expressed the opinion the Smiths had been cut with knives before being taken from the house. Two knives, wrapped in brown paper, were sent to Springfield state police laboratories to be examined for bloodstains.

A man's belt was found outside the home yesterday.

Five bullet holes were found in two windows and a door, and there were bloodstains in every room of the house. Investigators, however, have been unable to find any apparent criminal motive. It was not robbery, for $85 was left in a dresser and the Smith automobile was not taken. The ignition key was in place.

Smith, a cabinet maker, is 29 years old and his wife is 35. They have no children.

EISENHOWER GETS MESSAGE FROM SULTAN OF MOROCCO

GETTYSBURG, Pa., Dec. 1—President Eisenhower received a warmly-worded message yesterday from Mohammed Ben Youssef, Sultan of Morocco, whose attitude toward this country is considered of great importance because of the United States air bases in Morocco.

The Sultan recently resumed his throne after being exiled by France for nationalistic tendencies.

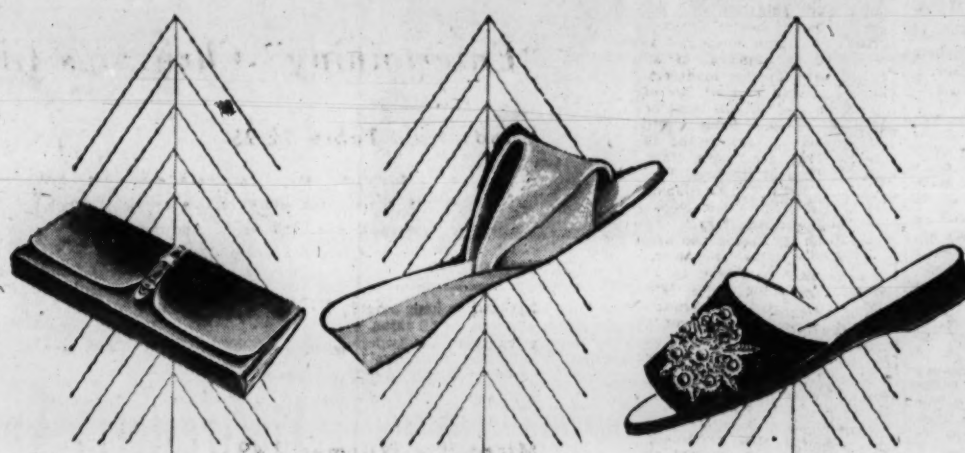

His message to the President was an acknowledgement of Mr. Eisenhower's note of congratulations on the occasion of the Sultan's "Feast of the Throne."

Nov. 18. In it the Sultan said, "We are very touched by the noble sentiments which you have kindly expressed in the name of the people of the United States. We are happy to note that the time-honored friendship of our two countries remains intact. We hope to see established in Morocco an era of liberty, that liberty for which your people and you, yourself, have never ceased to work and which is the best guarantee of a durable peace."

Canada Asks U.N. Compromise That Would Admit 18 Nations

Delegate Martin Warns That Failure to End Deadlock Would Be Matter of 'Deep Significance.'

UNITED NATIONS, N. Y., Dec. 1.—Canada today called on the United Nations special Political Committee to recommend admittance to the U.N. of 18 applicants, most of them long deprived of membership by veto in the Security Council.

Paul Martin, Canadian delegation leader, appealed to members of the 11-nation Security Council to recall, when it deals with the sensitive subject soon, "the widespread desire within this organization and outside, to have the world organization develop into the representative organ its founders envisaged."

Both the United States and the Soviet Union have indicated willingness to ratify all 18 applications, but bitter opposition to the nomination of Outer Mongolia was anticipated from Nationalist China. That delegation has expressed the determination to veto the Mongolian Communist republic in the Council if that action is necessary to prevent its admittance.

"It would be a matter of the greatest regret, and not without deep significance, if the efforts to break the deadlock on the membership issue did not succeed," Martin told the committee.

Confident of Success. "It is now our strong belief we can break the deadlock. We will then have accomplished in the course of this session a significant move in the field of international relations. The opportunity is ours if we will act reasonably, now."

Martin admitted that a spirit of compromise was essential to attain the objective. Other recommended solutions have failed to establish the principle of "universality," he pointed out, and negotiations among nations seemed the only answer to the problem.

In its 10 years of existence only nine new members have entered the U.N., Martin recalled.

Applications to attain membership must muster seven votes in the Security Council, where an adverse vote by one of the five major powers is considered a veto, and must be accepted by a two-thirds vote of the General Assembly.

Martin deplored the policy of permitting "a considerable number of countries to languish in frustration outside the U.N." and the tendency to consider admission as a "favor."

Actually, admittance brings new members under the influences of the international community and imposes obligations to respect charter principles, he said.

Rejected Exclusive Idea. He emphasized that members should not exclude applicants merely because of opposing political views, ideologies and traditions.

"We could of course have formed a U.N. of this kind of membership, exclusive to those who see alike on most things," he concluded. "When we rejected such a conception of the U.N., we accepted by implication a broad interpretation of the terms of the charter."

A Nationalist Chinese veto of Outer Mongolia would block the entry of 13 non-Communist nations sponsored by Western powers. The West has accepted reluctantly the doubtful legitimacy of the obscure Asian country for membership, and has given assent to the applications of Hungary, Albania, Romania and Bulgaria, also put forward by the Soviet Union.

Russia has gone on record as unopposed to approval of all 18 candidates but has made emphatic its stand that all five of the Communist nations must be admitted or the Soviet veto will be used to exclude the 13 others. They are Spain, Italy, Austria, Finland, Ireland, Portugal, Cambodia, Ceylon, Japan, Jordan, Laos, Libya and Nepal.

Debate Under Way. Debate in the special (ad hoc) Political Committee began on the resolution sponsored by 27 nations urging the widest latitude in deciding U.N. membership and requesting the Security Council to adopt that policy in considering the current applications. Russia has submitted an amendment in which the 18 candidates are listed.

In informed U.N. quarters, it was predicted that eventually the Nationalist Government on Formosa would comply with Washington requests to abstain from voting on the package deal, if it is submitted, instead of using the veto. The present mood of Nationalist delegates here, however, is to kill the Mongolian candidacy at any cost, diplomatic or otherwise.

With behind-the-scenes negotiations on the membership problem occupying the interest of delegates and U.N. observers, Political Committee No. 1 this morning continued debate on disarmament.

Plea on Nuclear Tests. At the opening of this morning's session, an Indian resolution directing a halt to large-scale nuclear tests was circulated among members of the 60-nation Political Committee. It put in concrete form similar requests which have been made by previous spokesmen for the Indian delegation and others.

The Indian resolution also called on the Disarmament Commission to "submit proposals without delay for the establishment of an armaments truce pending international agreement" on arms reduction and elimination of weapons of mass destruction.

It recommended that the General Assembly should be recessed, instead of adjourned at the conclusion of this session, subject to recall by the president because of the urgency of the disarmament problem.

Rickard Sandler, of Sweden, the first speaker today in the committee, urged members to instruct the Disarmament Commission to resume efforts toward attaining world arms reduction. He thought the commission should try to merge East-West plans into the "synthesis" of ideas which France has suggested.

CIO PAY AGREEMENT AVERTS NEW YORK BUS WALKOUT
 NEW YORK, Dec. 1 (UP)—The CIO transport workers union and eight private bus companies reached an agreement last night averting a walkout by 8200 bus drivers that would have disrupted service to 3,500,000 daily riders.
 The two-year contract provides for a 17-cents an hour package wage increase with eight cents effective immediately, six cents effective Dec. 1, 1956 and three cents in welfare and fringe benefits.
 Sick pay scales and holiday pay are still to be negotiated with each company.
 The city will urge the board of estimate to approve a fare increase on seven of the eight lines from 13 to 15 cents to pay the increase. The eighth line already is charging 15 cents.

Canadian Boy, 12, Who Sowed Only 3 Acres Is New Wheat King

JERRY LEISKE, 12 years old, with sample of the wheat he grew on his father's farm near Beiseker, Alta., and which won for him the North American wheat championship.

BEISEKER, Alta., Dec. 1 (AP)—The domain of the wheat king of North America is a three-acre patch on the prairie farm where he is sprouting to manhood. The king is a boy of 12 who won the wheat championship of the International Grain and Hay show.
 Jerry Leiske won the award Monday at the International Livestock Exposition at Chicago but it wasn't until Tuesday that the show learned that the new champion was anything but an adult.
 It turns out that his samples of Chinook wheat, which won over 300 other entries at the exposition's hay and grain show, were part of his first venture in wheat growing.
 Jerry, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Leiske, joined the local 4-H Club earlier this year and was coached by his 22-year-old sister, Marjorie, now a student nurse in Los Angeles.
 In the spring he planted his select kernels on three acres of the black loam broken by his grandfather 41 years ago. From this postage-stamp patch of the 1700-acre Leiske farm came North America's prize-winning wheat.
 "I don't know how he did it,"

one — is stored on the farm awaiting delivery to clogged elevators.
 Jerry's grandfather, a native of Russia, moved into the district 50 miles northeast of Calgary from South Dakota in 1908. Despite drought and depression the family built it into a prosperous holding.
 Next week Jerry gets a follow-up award—a party, in his honor staged by fellow 4-H Club competitors.

TROPICAL STORM BECOMES TYPHOON NEAR OKINAWA

TOKYO, Dec. 1 (AP)—A late-season tropical storm which battered the Philippines for two days blossomed into a full-blown typhoon today in the Pacific south of Okinawa.
 Typhoon Patsy was generating 100-mile-an-hour winds. The Far East Air Forces said the typhoon, moving northeast at 15 miles an hour, probably would pass between Okinawa and two Jima and blow itself out at sea. At 3 p.m. the typhoon center was located 550 miles south of Okinawa.

 At Manila, the Philippines, Red Cross said the storm left 36 known dead, more than 100 missing and widespread damage. Newspaper reports said 129 persons were missing in boat disasters.

SUSPECT ADMITS ASSAULTING AND KILLING GIRL, 8

Cab Driver Arrested in Danville Tells Police of Attacking Canton (Ill.) Child.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Dec. 1 (AP)—A taxi cab driver admitted today that he raped and killed 8-year-old Janice May in a Canton (Ill.) railroad yard last Saturday.

Lloyd E. Miller Jr., 29 years old, broke down after eight hours of intensive questioning shortly after midnight and gave a statement.

Miller told authorities that he came upon the little girl, whom he knew, as she was walking from her home to join her two older brothers at a playground.

"She said hello and was joyful," Miller said. "She walked with me to the railroad tracks."

He told of molesting the child and said "She started screaming and crying. She said she was going to tell her mother."

"I went hysterical. I struck her with my hand and she fell and hit her head on a cement block."

Miller tried to hide the dying girl under a railroad car. Then he fled to an abandoned house, where he got rid of some of his blood-stained clothing.

Janice's brothers, led by their dog, found her a short time later. The girl, her head battered, died in a few hours without recovering consciousness.

Miller told police that he went back to work as usual a few hours after the killing but that, when his girl friend joined him in his cab, he told her what he had done.

"I had to tell someone," he said.

The young woman was brought face-to-face with Miller last night shortly before his confession. He flatly denied her story of his admission at the time, but later admitted it was true.

Miller came under suspicion when he left Canton shortly after the killing.

He told police that he drove to Pekin, Ill., where he abandoned his cab, and then took a bus to Danville, Ill. He was arrested there Monday night as he was trying to buy a ticket for Evansville, Ind. He had been under intensive questioning here since.

Congressman Visits 52 G.I.s Jailed After Trials by Japanese

Says Service Men Are 'Cold, but Cheerful and Healthy'—Will Report to House on His Findings.

TOKYO, Dec. 1 (AP)—Representative Charles A. Boyle (Dem., Illinois), yesterday visited 52 convicted United States service men and found them "cold, but pretty clean, cheerful and healthy" in Japan's Fuchu prison.

Boyle is here to obtain information for the House Judiciary Committee on the trial and punishment of United States service men convicted by foreign courts for offenses committed off duty and outside their camps.

Boyle told a reporter he was disturbed that Americans sometimes were held in solitary confinement without much reason but added that "conditions are constantly improving."

He said he was told the 52 Americans, two British and two Dutch service men in prison in Japan would be moved soon to a better heated quarters.

"They looked pretty good, weightwise," Boyle said, adding that their main complaint was that the "food is terrible."

He plans to meet today with Chief Justice Kotaro Tanaka, United States Ambassador John Allison and officials of the Justice Ministry. The congressman said he hopes to discuss his findings with Army Secretary Wilbur Brucker, who is due here next week.

Boyle said he will leave tomorrow for the mountain town of Maebashi, where four United States soldiers, including one of his constituents, are on trial accused of inciting a free-for-all fight.

He said the soldiers' American attorney, Frank H. Scollins, donated his cab, and then took a bus to Danville, Ill. He was arrested there Monday night as he was trying to buy a ticket for Evansville, Ind. He had been under intensive questioning here since.

will move to quash the indictment on grounds the four are being tried in a Japanese court in violation of the Constitution of the United States.

Boyle said Scollins will contend the administrative agreement permitting the Japanese trial is illegal because it was never ratified as a treaty by the United States Senate.

FARM UNION MAN ASSAILS TRACTOR GIFT TO PRESIDENT

INDIANAPOLIS, Dec. 1 (AP)—The president of the Indiana Farmers Union, who said he was the "largest single stockholder in the Indiana Farm Bureau Co-operative Association," protested today against the presentation of a $4,000 tractor-cultivator to President Eisenhower.

The tractor-cultivator, equipped with built-in radio and cigarette lighter, was the joint gift of the Indiana, Ohio and Pennsylvania Farm Bureau Co-operatives.

The objector, John C. Raber of Elkhart county, said in a statement:

"While I wholeheartedly concur in an expression of best wishes to Mr. Eisenhower personally, I think it is an ironic, tragic and cynical gesture on the part of an organization to be giving an expensive gift bought with farmers' money to the head of an Administration which has allowed the income of farmers to drop 37 per cent since 1932."

"Mr. Eisenhower, I am sure, did not accept the tractor for the motive of personal gain,

PILOT MADE VAIN EFFORT TO CLEAR AIR BASE HOUSES

Deaths in Alaskan
Crash Rise to 14 —
Bus Driver Saved Children.

FAIRBANKS, Alaska, Dec. 1 (AP)—The last few seconds of Lt. Alfred M. Pounder's life apparently were spent in a desperate attempt to keep his F-34 jet fighter from plunging into an Eielson Air Force Base housing area.

He failed and he and 12 other persons perished Tuesday noon in the flaming wreckage of his plane and six multiple-family houses. A fourteenth person died of burns yesterday.

The story of the pilot's struggle came first from an unidentified Air Force sergeant who reported he was walking by base headquarters when the jet roared overhead, its wing dipping deeply in a sharp turn.

"The pilot was struggling with the controls," the sergeant said. "You could tell he was trying to avoid the buildings."

Air Force investigators said the direction of the plane indicated the pilot had been fighting to maneuver it out of the housing area. He missed clearing it by only a few yards.

The toll might have been higher if it hadn't been for the quick thinking of Airman 2-C Norman Stauffer, 19 years old, who was driving a school bus taking 35 children home to lunch. He was driving east toward the scene of the accident when he saw the plane heading toward a building.

"I knew the plane was going to crash," he said. "So I stopped the bus and told all the kids to get out and run back from the area. The kids sure scattered."

Air base officials said if Stauffer had continued on his normal course and turned the corner he would have been in the path of the plane as it crossed the road and came to a stop next to an apartment building.

In Stauffer's bus were the two children of Army M. Sgt. Weldon M. Rucker and his wife, The Dallas (Texas) couple, and Mrs. Rucker's mother, Mrs.

MOUNTIE HOLDS BACK CRUMBLING WALL, SAVES MAN

WINDEMERE, B.C., Dec. 1 (AP)—A young Royal Canadian Mounted Police constable used his body to wedge back a weakening wall of gypsum and ice more than an hour to save the life of a trapped man.

Forty men finally freed Albert Portman, 50 years old, while Constable H. D. Bowyer, 22, spread-eagled his body to stop the crumbling wall of broken-up gypsum from crushing the trapped man. Gypsum is a light, rock-like material. Both men were taken to a hospital.

Tuesday Portman fell into a hopper being filled with the crushed gypsum when a pile collapsed. Protrusion of his legs through the bottom of the hopper gave him enough air to keep him alive until he was dug out. The constable suffered from exposure against the icy wall. A fellow officer said no one else could take his place because the gypsum would have collapsed on the trapped man if the constable moved.

DEWEY SHORT IN ARGENTINA, SAYS U.S. DISTRICTS RUSSIA

BUENOS AIRES, Dec. 1 (AP)—Representative Dewey Short (Rep., Missouri), arrived by ship yesterday and the newspaper La Epoca quoted him as saying: "We do not believe in Russia's peaceful promises. We are convinced peace is possible only through strong armed force."

Short, a member and former chairman of the House Armed Services Committee, is on a vacation cruise with his wife.

He said the United States is reducing military spending year after year but this does not mean it is being deceived by any Russian peace offensives.

Emma B. McBrayer, were killed. Serious burns were suffered by six persons in the crash and two suffered lesser injuries. The rescue operations in the 16-below-zero weather also took their toll. Eighty-five persons were treated for exposure to cold, two for smoke inhalation and 18 for cuts and bruises.

Today, more than 1000 Air Force and Army men worked at clearing the debris. Officers and enlisted men worked side by side, including Brig. Gen. John F. Ruggles, commander of the Army's Yukon forces.

FALSTAFF SEEKS REMOVAL FROM N.A.A.C.P. ROSTER

Falstaff Brewing Corp. asked the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People to remove the brewery's name from a list of life members in the N.A.A.C.P., following a scattered boycott of Falstaff beer by some customers in Mississippi and Louisiana, Harvey Beffa, executive vice president of the company, said today.

Beffa said the brewery purchased a $500 life membership in the N.A.A.C.P. last year, but did so on behalf of George E. Baker Jr., one of its Negro salesmen. Baker's name—not the company's—should have been placed on the membership list, Beffa said.

Hubert L. Brown, president of the St. Louis chapter of the N.A.A.C.P., said it was his clear understanding that the membership was purchased in Falstaff's name. Brown said Baker simply represented the company in the matter.

BRANIFF ORDERS FIVE JET AIRLINERS FOR $30,000,000

DALLAS, Tex., Dec. 1 (UP)—Braniff Airways has placed an order for five Boeing 707 jet transports costing about $30,000,000.

The transaction was completed last night between Braniff officers and the Boeing Airplane Co. for the 600-mile-an-hour, 118-passenger jet planes. Braniff became the third major airline to place an order for the Boeing jet aircraft and the first to specify a Pratt and Whitney engine of advanced design over the J57 jet engine, according to William M. Allen, president of Boeing. The delivery of the first 707 jet is scheduled for October 1959.

Denies Dulles Claim G.O.P. Kept Foreign Policy Out of Campaign

WASHINGTON, Dec. 1.—The Democratic National Committee has challenged a claim by Secretary of State John Foster Dulles that the Republican party made a "sound and admirable record" in keeping foreign policy out of recent presidential campaigns.

The challenge was in the form of a "special memorandum" issued yesterday to Democratic party leaders around the country. It quoted this comment from Dulles's press conference Tuesday:

"I think if you will examine the record of the Republican party over the last three presidential campaigns . . . you will find that it constitutes a very sound and admirable record to follow."

Dulles's appeal to restrict the foreign policy debate in next year's campaign to "constructive" criticism followed a similar plea by President Eisenhower and Vice President Richard M. Nixon. Dulles told reporters: "Peril could result from careless or misinformed indulgence in partisan excesses."

In its memorandum yesterday, the Democrats printed this quote which, they said, Dulles made in a Denver interview Aug. 9, 1952:

"The trend of our present foreign policies is to put our nation in the greatest peril it has ever been in the entire course of our national history."

The seven-page document quoted Mr. Eisenhower, the then Republican presidential nominee, as having told a Cumberland, Md., audience in 1952:

"... Instead of a growing peace in the world, what do we have? ... A series of blunders leading to a conflict that now has cost us 120,000 in casualties. These things must stop."

Also quoted was Mr. Nixon's nationally broadcast speech March 13, 1954, in which the Vice President said:

"And incidentally, in mentioning Secretary Dulles, isn't it wonderful that we finally have a Secretary of State who isn't taken in by the Communists, who stands up to them?"

All the quotations were lifted either from speeches, news in-

Stevenson Says G.O.P. Used No Moderation in 1952.

MIAMI, Fla., Dec. 1 (AP)—Adlai Stevenson, candidate for the Democratic nomination for President, said today he agreed with Secretary of State Dulles that the presidential candidates should avoid "partisan excesses" in discussing foreign policy during the campaign but that was not what the Republicans did in 1952.

"I agree with Secretary Dulles that we should avoid 'partisan excesses' in discussing foreign policy in the forthcoming campaign," Stevenson said at a press conference on his Florida tour.

"But he (Dulles) went on to say that the Republican party's conduct in the 1952 campaign was an 'admirable' example of restraint."

"In 1952 the Republicans not only shamelessly exploited the Korean war politically and denounced the Democratic Administration for the 'loss' of China and as virtually subversive, but the Secretary himself, who now pleads for restraint, labeled the containment policy as 'immoral' and proposed to liberate the satellites."

"I hope we Democrats have a higher concept of what constitutes partisan excesses than the Secretary."

Stevenson then went on in reply to other questions to point out some of the things he thought were wrong with the Republican foreign policy the past three years.

He said that starting with President Eisenhower's State of the Union Message in which he spoke in favor of "unleashing Chiang Kai-shek" there were a series of slogans and a series of threats which Stevenson said "threatened our Allies more than our enemies."

"They finally brought us to the brink of war in China and the Formosa straits."

Stevenson said that at the "summit" conference, President Eisenhower had "to reassure the entire world that our intentions were peaceful."

All of these things, Stevenson said, served to make the United States out as "an irritant power in the world."

SENATE GROUP TO LOOK INTO VHF
AND UHF POLICY

WASHINGTON, Dec. 1 (AP)—Chairman Magnuson (Dem.), Washington, announced yesterday the Senate Commerce Committee will begin hearings Jan.

17 in an inquiry into current radio and television operations. Magnuson said the Federal Communications Commission has not established a national policy on certain aspects of competitive TV service and indicated he will look into the reasons for not doing so.

Petitioners from 35 areas which have both ultra high frequency and very high frequency stations recently asked the FCC to "unmix" the assignments. That is, they wanted either all VHF or all UHF in an area. The main reason given was that under present conditions UHF finds it difficult to compete with VHF. The FCC turned down the petitions.

Magnuson made public a letter from FCC Chairman George C. McConaughy saying the question of separating VHF and UHF channels should be dealt with on a national basis. McConaughy's letter said it was the FCC view this problem "could not be approached on a piecemeal basis of scattered communities."

TENTH AIR FORCE CHIEF
VISITS GUARD UNITS HERE

Maj. Gen. Robert E. L. Eaton, new commander of the Tenth Air Force, made a flying visit yesterday to units of the Missouri Air National Guard, which are under his command. His headquarters is Selfridge Air Force Base, Mich.

Gen. Eaton and three members of his staff made their first stop at Air Guard headquarters at Jefferson City, following visits at St. Joseph and Lambert-St. Louis Field. The St. Louis units are the 110th Bombardment Squadron and headquarters 131st Bombardment Wing.

OFFICIAL LABELS
CONGRESS RED

Head of Inquiry Urges Group Be Required to Register — Up to Subversives Board.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 1 (AP)—A member of the Subversive Activities Control Board recommended today the Civil Rights Congress be required to register as a Communist-front.

Retiring board member David J. Coddaira found the organization is "substantially directed and controlled by the Communist party," and is "primarily operated for the purpose of giving aid and support to Communists."

There was no immediate comment from the congress. Coddaira conducted months of hearings on a petition by Attorney General Brownell to require the group to register under the 1950 Internal Security Act, list its officers and give an annual financial accounting.

Test Suit Pending. Constitutionality of registration provisions of the act has been challenged by the Communist party. The matter is awaiting decision by the United States Supreme Court.

Coddaira's report now goes to the full board for action. The Civil Rights Congress can file exceptions and ask for oral arguments on them.

Coddaira said the organization was planned and created by the Communist party in 1946 through a merger of several organizations, including the International Labor Defense.

This was done, he said, to utilize defense of civil rights for party purposes and to raise and maintain large mass defense and bail funds for party use.

Country-Wide Group. The board member said the entire party organization was mobilized to establish and maintain Congress chapters throughout the country.

He said William L. Patterson, identified as a party functionary of long standing, was installed as the Congress's principal executive officer in 1948 and has so served since.

As defense of party leaders became the major activity, Coddaira said, the organization posted bail for party leaders indicted under the Smith act and launched a campaign to raise more than $1,000,000 for bail purposes and thousands of dollars for legal costs.

Coddaira said that in some areas the party operated in the name of the Congress without bothering to set up a facade.

YIELD TO FISH ON MENU FOR PETS

WASHINGTON, Dec. 1 (AP)—An active campaign is being conducted in the Midwest to develop markets for fish as food for pets and fur farm animals, Secretary of the Interior McKay has announced.

The idea is to replace dwindling supplies of horse meat. McKay said the work being done by the Fish and Wildlife service is part of its program for developing new markets for fishery products.

As a result of gradually declining supplies of horse meat, which has been the basic fur animal food, fur ranchers are investigating the possibilities of developing under-utilized fish as a substitute. McKay said in a news release.

Animal food associations as well as some pet food canneries are investigating the possibilities of using carp, sheepshead, smelt and similar species, he added.

The campaign is centered on the shores of Lake Erie and excellent progress is already indicated, McKay said.

He explained that fresh markets for the fish which would be utilized for animal food are limited and that what could be a valuable resource is not being used. In addition, the expanded growth of such fish in midwestern waters is having an adverse effect upon the growth of more popular food fishes.

He said that in recent years not fishermen in Lake Erie and other midwestern waters have reported that as much as 90 per cent of their daily catches were fish having only a marginal market.

RETIRED HOUSTON EDITOR
DIES; FUNERAL TOMORROW

Special to the Post-Dispatch. HOUSTON, Mo.—Edgar Kilgore Lyles, retired editor of the Houston Herald, died Wednesday in his home here. He was 89 years old.

Lyles was editor and publisher of the weekly newspaper here for 37 years before he retired in 1945. He was one of the founders of the Houston Chamber of Commerce and was widely known in Democratic political circles in this area. He was appointed an honorary colonel by Gov. Donnelly during the Governor's first term.

Funeral services will be at 2 p.m. Friday at the Houston Methodist Church with burial in the cemetery there. Survivors include his wife, Nellie, and three daughters. His first wife and a son preceded him in death.

Congressmen, Magsaysay Confer. MANILA, Dec. 1 (AP)—Seven members of the House Foreign Affairs Committee conferred with President Ramon Magsaysay today on United States military and economic aid programs. The group, headed by Representative Zablocki (Dem., Wis.), arrived last night from Jakarta on a tour of Europe and Asia.

FOUR-POWER RULE IN BERLIN STILL HOLDS, WEST SAYS

we who decide matters and nobody else."

Baum's stand on United States Army cars with radios, made in a speech broadcast by the East Berlin radio, differed with that of the Russians who said the cars would be permitted to enter East Berlin as long as they did not transmit "incessantly."

The official Communist party newspaper Neues Deutschland rejected the Western stand that Berlin is still ruled by four-power occupation forces.

It charged that the United States, Britain and France themselves broke the four-power agreement by concluding the Paris pacts rearming West Germany and bringing it into NATO and by adopting West German laws in West Berlin.

"The systematic building up of West Berlin as a provocation center proves the Western powers themselves for a long time no longer have held to the four-power agreements and consider West Berlin—according to their own words—themselves in the side of the German democratic (Communist) republic," the paper said.

Neues Deutschland said the East German Communists "will know how to repel every provocation of the West Berlin front-city politicians."

It said the Western Allies must negotiate with the East German government to solve any "difficulties" arising from the new situation.

Threat to Western Sectors.

Western officials feared the new hate campaign against West Berlin indicated the start of new Communist pressures against the economic life of the free zone in an effort to freeze out the United States, Britain and France.

They pointed out that a repudiation by the Russians of the four-power occupation agreement could mean the closing of air and land lifelines to West Berlin from Germany.

The question of four-power occupation arose last Sunday when East German police detained two United States Congressmen, the wife of one of them and their military escort because the Army sedan they were riding in contained a radio telephone.

The Communists said this was a violation of East German law and United States Commandant Maj. Gen. Charles L. Dasher Jr. protested to Soviet Commandant Maj. Gen. P. A. Dibrova.

Dibrova rejected the protest and set forth the Soviet view that Berlin was no longer an occupied city and the Western powers would have to respect East German law.

The West Berlin city government called for firm Allied diplomatic action in Moscow "to prevent any unilateral arbitrary change in the four-power status of the city and to safeguard the present contractual relationship for Berlin."

West Berlin police said today Communist police arrested an East German refugee woman and her 9-year-old son at the East-West border. Her two small daughters escaped the East German police and fled to West Berlin.

Police said the woman, Mrs. Johanna Schmiedeknecht, had fled to West Berlin with her husband and children from East Germany a few weeks ago. She had gone to a subway station just inside the Soviet sector to meet a friend.

BONN RULES OUT DEAL WITH REDS ON UNIFICATION

an systems. He will not be able to bring about such a treaty again, neither with the (West German) Federal Republic of today nor with the reunified Germany of tomorrow."

Von Brentano did not repudiate the agreement which Chancellor Adenauer made with the Soviets in Moscow in September to establish diplomatic recognition, but said such relations are only "an event of technical importance for the time being."

"The Soviet Union has it in its hands to bring about the normalization of relations between the German and Russian peoples," he declared.

Won't Betray Friendship.

Referring to the demands of the Socialists and some other West German politicians for direct German-Russian negotiations on German unity, Von Brentano declared:

"At no time and by no action of ours shall we jeopardize the confidence and friendship linking us with those who have given us unqualified support to the German interest."

He said, however, that the Bonn government will do "everything to convince the Soviet Union that the policy pursued by us is the only one we can legitimately follow and, incidentally, the only one contributing to world peace."

"I shall not abandon the hope that the establishment of diplomatic relations between the Federal Republic and the Soviet Union will give us the opportunity to convince the Soviet Union of this," he added.

"The (West German) federal government will continue to pursue the policy of German reunification in close and trusting co-operation with its allies. It rejects any thought of endangering this infinitely valuable friendship and the support it implies by any vacillation, inconsistency or inactivity."

Wants Prisoners Freed.

Von Brentano appealed to the Russians to release the remainder of the 9,626 German war prisoners whose freedom was promised on Adenauer's visit to Moscow. The flow of returnees halted six weeks ago, after 5863 had been sent back to both East and West Germany.

Von Brentano said the Russian announcement that it has transferred East Berlin to the Communist East German regime questions the four-power status of the former German capital agreed upon by the Big Four powers.

"We know that the Western powers are loyal to these agreements and will defend them," he said. "We cannot believe that the Soviet Union intends to tear them up."

"But this incident shows anew that the present situation of Berlin must necessarily and continually lead to conflicts that prevent a real relaxation of international tension from taking place."

"The elimination of such focal points of danger by the reunification of Germany into one state is the necessary first step to a lasting international relaxation and state of peace."

MAN WHO WAITED
IN JAIL 48 DAYS

clerk of the Court of Criminal Correction showed the circuit attorney's office was informed that day that Fleming had been held for trial. However, before a case can be docketed for circuit court action, the circuit attorney's office must file an information, or formal charges, with the circuit court clerk.

It was not until Oct. 3 that Circuit Attorney Edward L. Dowd's office filed this information with the clerk, a period of 48 days during which Fleming was in the city jail because he was unable to supply a bond for his release.

The circuit court took comparatively quick action, calling Fleming for arraignment Oct. 11, only eight days after the information was filed. He again pleaded not guilty and his case was set for last Monday. At that time both sides announced they were ready for trial, but no courtroom was available.

Fleming's situation was brought to Judge Walsh's attention yesterday. Circuit Attorney Dowd told the Post-Dispatch he did not know about the Fleming case, but added that in addition to the bogus check charges, Fleming was to be charged with being an habitual criminal, having been convicted twice previously in Illinois.

"Fleming was offered a trial twice this fall," Dowd said, "and each time he refused, saying he was not ready." Referring to the 48-day confinement in jail, Dowd added, "this has not deprived Fleming of anything because he still doesn't want a trial."

Court records showed that Fleming's cases were set for trial only once, which was last Monday.

Because Dowd's office wished to charge Fleming with being an habitual criminal, certified copies of records of his prior convictions and prison terms had to come from Illinois. Their late arrival here delayed the case, Dowd's office said. Fleming was convicted in 1949 of larceny and he was sentenced to one to three years in Menard penitentiary. In 1955, he was convicted of defrauding by check and was sentenced to six months at the Vandalia, Ill., prison farm.

Some circuit judges will not permit assistants of Dowd to file prior conviction charges shortly before the trial is scheduled, Dowd said. He added, however, that others would permit such filing.

or "acreage reserve" plan to aid farmers in shifting from harvested crops to grass; this will be geared to better land use and while it will not be a cure-all it will be constructive. There will also be recommendations that will give farmers more freedom under the production control program and there will be "vigorous programs of surplus disposal."

Benson said the Federal Government now had $7,500,000,000 invested in farm price support operations, that it cost $1,000,000 a day merely to store surpluses and that "virtually all of this accumulation was piled up under a system which the Democrats now say is a solution to the farm problem."

The text of Benson's address was released in advance by the national committee and it did not read as though the Secretary himself had written it. The speech lacked the dogged earnestness that is one of Benson's main characteristics, and it devoted a good deal of time to purely political jousting with the Democrats.

Discusses Moderation. Benson said, for example, he had been reading that there is no room for "moderates" in the Democratic party, which means to him he said, that there is no room for farmers because most farmers are "moderates" and are proud of it. Adlai E. Stevenson, the only announced Democratic presidential candidate, said two weeks ago that "moderation is the spirit of the times." Gov. Averell Harriman of New York, a potential candidate, repudiated the "moderation" idea.

Benson was applauded when he said that "agriculture is not going to pot," that the Republicans will evolve the best possible program, and that this program "is unlikely to bear the imprint of such agricultural experts as Jake Arvey and Carmine DeSapio," a reference to the Democratic organization leaders of Chicago and New York.

Benson asserted that high farm prices in the war and post-war periods were produced by the war itself and not by high price supports, and that no political party should take credit for those high prices unless it was willing to assume responsibility for the war.

The Secretary accused the Democratic National Committee's special advisory committee on agriculture, whose membership includes former Secretaries of Agriculture Charles Brannan and Claude Wickard, of making a false statement when it said the Eisenhower Administration put sliding price supports into effect "immediately on coming into office."

In fact, said Benson, flexible price supports are just beginning to become operative. Weeks forecast that the Republicans would sweep the country again next November because, he said, most people appreciate that they never had it so good and are in no mood to risk a change. "Who wants to pull the rug from under prosperity?" he asked.

The Administration, Weeks said, has stopped a "government run economy" and is supporting a "government-encouraged self-managed self-supporting economy."

The 1956 election, Weeks said, will be decided at the factory pay window and in the grocery store by families who have more material wealth than ever before. Labor will not gamble on a change under these conditions, he predicted.

"There is no such thing as guaranteed annual prosperity," Weeks said. "Current prosperity to a large extent stems from the kind of government we have today. Future prosperity in large part will depend on the kind of government we have tomorrow. The key to the current era of good feeling and good times is President Eisenhower."

Forces Allowed to Expand. Echoing Weeks, Mitchell said that "The American working man never had it so good." The nation is at peace and growing strong because the Eisenhower Administration has provided a climate "in which the natural forces of America have been allowed to expand and develop," he said.

The Administration policy has effected real labor-management peace, Mitchell continued, by stressing settlements at the local level, and has brought about a proper balance of the federal-state "partnership."

Lodge's theme was that Republicans, as members of the party holding executive power, "should not engage in attack or in defense, but present our achievements to the people and leave it up to them to judge."

Events Listed. As examples Lodge offered, "not in a partisan spirit," the following "list of events in which the United States in recent years has played an important and sometimes a vital part."

American Hemisphere: The defeat of Communism in Guatemala and prevention of the spread of Communism to other parts of Central America, the Caracas conference and the application of the Rio pact to Costa Rica.

Europe: The Trieste settlement, the Austrian treaty and the membership of West Germany in the Atlantic.

Near and Middle East: The "northern tier" defense pact and strengthening of Pakistan and Iraq, the Iranian oil settlement, the Anglo-Egyptian Suez settlement and the maintenance of the Israeli-Arab armistice agreements. Lodge conceded the Israeli-Egyptian situation is still "explosive" as a result of a cannon-for-cannon deal between Communist Czechoslovakia and Egypt.

Far East: Peace in Korea;

help to the former Indochina states of Viet Nam, Cambodia and Laos; the Manila pact, and the avoidance of war over the issue of Formosa and the Pescadores without permitting Communist expansion.

United Nations: President Eisenhower's storm-for-peace proposal, the liberation of American flyers from Red China, and the dwindling of vitriolic anti-American utterances by Soviet U.N. representatives from 80 per cent in 1952 to 16 per cent in 1955.

U.S. Standing at Peak. Lodge said that as a result of President Eisenhower's efforts at the Big Four "summit" meeting in Geneva the standing of the United States throughout the world is higher than it has ever been in history. Of the recent Geneva conference of the Big Four foreign ministers, which Mr. Eisenhower said would provide the "acid test" of whether the summit conference would generate tangible results, Lodge said that the "hard" and "unpalatable" facts of the Soviet position were brought into focus.

The foreign ministers' conference has been described by Democrats and many independent observers as a failure.

In line with the current Republican "peace and prosperity" slogan, Lodge observed:

"The great and overriding fact that we have prosperity without inflation, without waste and with an excellent chance of a balanced budget; and that we are having this prosperity without war and without war orders—is the most effective rebuttal there is to the charges which Communist propaganda makes against us."

CHIEF USES FIRE HELMET TO ROUSE DEAF WOMAN

DALLAS, Dec. 1 (AP)—Battalion Fire Chief A. D. Marable found a new use for his fire helmet when he helped evacuate 20 residents from a burning rooming house yesterday.

When shouts failed to rouse a 45-year-old deaf mute woman, he awakened her by shaking her. Unable to make the terrified woman understand, Marable finally took off his fire helmet and flashed his light on the lettering.

"She got the idea fast," Marable said. "She grabbed a robe and ran out then."

ITALIAN TEACHERS STRIKE AGAINST 'INDECENT' SALARIES

ROME, Dec. 1 (UP)—Italy's 91,600 secondary school teachers walked out today in a three-day, nationwide strike in protest against "indecently poor" living conditions and salaries as low as $70.40 a month.

Rome city transport workers called a 24-hour walkout to back demands for improved work shifts and wage benefits. Italy's Communists, quiet through the months of Moscow "peace offensive," were showing signs of returning to active agitation and were backing the teachers and transport workers strikes. It was the fifth teachers' strike in nine months and was backed by both Communist and non-Communist unions.

Mergers of Duplicating Unions In Prospect as CIO and AFL Begin Meetings to Achieve Unity

Groups That Have Fought Each Other Through the Years Will Be Encouraged to Combine for Intensive Organization Effort.

By NORMAN WALKER

NEW YORK, Dec. 1 (AP).

MERGERS within a merger are in prospect today, with the AFL and CIO joining forces for the first time in 20 years.

George Meany, the ex-plumber who will steer this powerful machine through the obstacles ahead, has clamped a heavy hand on any and all union maneuvers which by any chance might interfere with his main objective of the last three years—the alliance which will be approved by the two groups in meetings starting here today.

But plans already are well advanced for a number of smaller, weaker unions in both the AFL and CIO to merge into a stronger, more effective bargaining and organizing units.

Textile Union Example. For instance, the separate AFL and CIO textile unions have spent millions of dollars scrapping each other for years, trying to snatch already organized members from each other.

Amalgamation of these two unions into one camp for an all-out textile organizing drive is expected, as also among rival paperworker unions, meatpacking unions, and possible electrical workers unions.

The constitution of the merged AFL-CIO states as a policy that unions with conflicting and duplicating jurisdictions shall be encouraged, though not compelled, to combine.

Office or white collar workers and those in the oil-chemical and textile industries are reported to be major organizing targets after the merger.

Re-natal of special organizing drives in the South also is charted.

Miners Union Boss John L. Lewis, still mad at Meany over that word battle at the 1947 convention of the AFL, has not been invited to join the combined AFL-CIO. Meany's attitude toward Lewis and all other unions affiliated with neither the AFL nor CIO is that, once the merger is completed, they can apply to get in if they wish.

Unions Stopped Cold. Perhaps the most compelling reason for the merger was that Meany and most union leaders came to realize that organized labor had been stopped cold in its tracks.

Unions have made little substantial membership gain in the last 10 years. They feel this has crippled their ability to bargain with employers and to exert influence on the national scene.

Unions have picked up a few million more members in the last few years, but this has hardly kept up with the increasing size of the work force.

This was pointed up in a recent Labor Department survey. It showed unions grew from 3,500,000 to 14,500,000 members in the 1935-45 decade. In the next 10 years they gained only 3,500,000 for a present estimated membership of 18,000,000, including 1,000,000 in Canada.

Under the merger the new organization is to hold conventions only every two years, whereas the AFL and CIO have until now held annual conventions. A 29-member executive council will be empowered to make policy decisions between conventions. Initially 19 council members will come from present AFL unions and 10 from CIO unions.

Once a year presidents of all AFL-CIO unions are to meet with the executive council as a general board to advise the council.

Executive Committee. The most powerful policy-making unit probably will be an eight-man executive committee, composed of three executive council members from present AFL unions, three from present CIO unions, plus Meany and William Schnitzer. The latter is now Meany's chief aid as AFL secretary-treasurer and is to have the same job under the merger.

As time goes on, Meany may make a strong bid to rid himself of unions of graft and corruption. He has moved against union leaders dipping into members' funds for their own use. He has offered to cooperate with Congress in framing legislation to safeguard union resources.

Many played a major role in ousting the International Longshoremen's Association, the racket-ridden waterfront union, from the AFL. In fighting labor racketeers he has had the full support of the CIO. It's not generally known, but ever since a Senate committee reported a $1,000,000 shortage in AFL laundry worker welfare funds, Meany has had a squad from AFL headquarters trying to straighten out the scandal.

These moves are pretty strong stuff in an AFL organization where the traditional policy has been that the parent federation would leave each member union to its own devices.

Problems Expected. Meany is the first to admit the merger won't be all peaches and cream. Rivalries between labor organizations to do a better job by pooling their resources within one family than has been possible with rival federations.

"We are not perfect," Meany says. "We have our troubles and we have all sorts of people within our unions, good, bad and indifferent."

"But we have an American philosophy and we have a policy that we feel constitutes a great deal to the up-building of the American way of life."

"If we have the power and pledge to use it for good and solely for good, who can object to 16,000,000 people gathering together in one organization?"

Record of Ministers' Parley Shows Fading of 'Geneva Spirit'

State Department Publishes Texts of Discussions — Sharp Exchanges Between Dulles and Molotov Disclosed.

By WARREN ROGERS JR.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 1 (AP).

A RECORD of the verbal sparring that ended in the deadlock of the Geneva foreign ministers' conference was published by the State Department today, just two weeks after the meeting ended.

It showed the "spirit of Geneva" fading with Soviet Foreign Minister Molotov accusing this country of wanting to establish "centers of espionage," and Secretary of State Dulles calling "almost infamous" Molotov's implication that only Russia was interested in disarmament.

Molotov also accused the Western Big Three of "seeking to interfere with Soviet affairs" in some of their proposals for increasing East-West tourist attractions, and said it appeared they "did not wish to reach an agreement."

Dulles called that the latest of many "frivolous" remarks by Molotov.

Nothing Substantially New. The conference ended in disagreement Nov. 16. Last night the State Department put out a 307-page printed report on it which, like the record of the summit conference published a month ago, contained nothing substantially new.

Some of the texts, however, had not previously been made available and it was the first time the department brought them all together.

The pamphlet includes copies of all proposals put forward by Britain, France, Russia and the United States at the foreign ministers' meeting. It also includes principal statements by Secretary of State Dulles and statements by the other foreign ministers previously issued as conference papers.

Leadoff document is the text of Dulles' Nov. 18 report to the American people on why no agreement was reached by the foreign ministers on any of the three general problems staked out by President Eisenhower and the other heads of government: German unity and European security, disarmament, broader East-West contacts.

The explanation for no agreement, Dulles said in that report, "is this: the Soviet Union... is not yet willing to pay the price needed to get these results."

There follows a record of Molotov's sparring with Dulles, British Foreign Secretary Macmillan and French Foreign Minister Pinay.

Optimism Dies. At the point Dulles speaks optimistically of efforts to reach agreement on German unity and European security. That was in a statement on Oct. 29 when he said "we have made considerable progress." But a few days later, after Russia had denied its position on a European security arrangement without unifying Germany, Dulles decried this as a "fundamental and critical difference" blocking any agreement.

On disarmament, Dulles decried Molotov for implying that only Russia was seriously interested in the question. Dulles said, "That is such a grotesque picture that I do not think that that type of propaganda is really effective."

On the third agenda item—lowering the Iron Curtain—Molotov blasted the West's proposal for setting up information centers in each other's cities. That, Molotov said, was nothing but an underhanded attempt to flood the Soviet bloc with spies operating out of what "are really centers of espionage."

Others to Issue Records. A department spokesman said Britain and France agreed to Secretary Dulles's plan to make the record of the conference available to reporters. Britain is reported ready to issue its own record in the next few days. France, it is believed, may follow suit.

Foreign Minister Pinay, it was disclosed in the documents, delivered a hot blast against Russia's European security proposals during the conference.

He said the Soviet Union was seeking to separate Western Europe from its American ties with a proposal: "Europe for Europeans."

"But to isolate Europe today would mean delivering it into the hands of the strongest European power," he declared. "So long as the world is divided in two, it is undeniable that Western Europe could not be separated from the Atlantic community without running a mortal risk."

France is not prepared even to consider, he said, dissolving the Atlantic alliance to meet Russia's objections.

Russia Wooing Border Lands Through Trade

Moscow Hopes *to Bring Middle East Into Economic Dependence.

By LACIOS LEDERER

Copyright, 1955, London Observer Foreign News Service.

LONDON.

THE current Soviet trade offensive into the "uncommitted" areas of the world has taken another serious turn, with indications that the East European satellites have been brought into this maneuver.

Instructed to switch part of their foreign trade to underdeveloped countries in sensitive border areas, the satellites thus reinforce the new Soviet trade offensive intended to replace Western economic influence at critical points. The strategy apparently was decided on at a recent Prague meeting of the Council for Mutual Economic Aid, the joint planning board of the Soviet bloc.

Parallel with this effort to bring the borderline states into long-term economic dependency on the Soviet bloc are offers of technical assistance, accompanied by anti-Western propaganda.

At the same time, the interest of the satellite governments in trading with the advanced Western countries has markedly diminished.

As an example, Czechoslovakia has not replied to an invitation to send a trade delegation to London, and the Hungarian delegation here has spent three months without getting down to serious business.

East bloc trade delegations are negotiating in most countries of the Middle East and southeast Asia and are also due to reopen talks with Greece and Turkey.

Industrial equipment and armaments are offered to the underdeveloped countries in return for long-term delivery contracts of their home-grown foodstuffs and raw materials.

RED CHINESE PLOT REPORTED SMASHED IN PHILIPPINES

MANILA, Dec. 1 (UP)—Defense Secretary Sotero Cabahug said today police have broken up an overseas Chinese Communist organization, plotting overthrow of the Philippines government.

The defense chief said the 10 members of the ring arrested so far included the "contact man" between the Philippines Hukbalahap movement and the Communist party in China.

FLEESON G.O.P. Setting Up Eisenhower As the Indispensable Man

Hall, Other Leaders Beating Drums as if President Hadn't Been Ill — Nixon Also Pushed for Second Term.

By DORIS FLEESON

CHICAGO.

THE Republican National Committee is beating the drums here for an Eisenhower-Nixon ticket as if the President's heart attack had never occurred.

The isolation of other candidates is complete. No risks are admitted, no doubts are allowed.

The gospel expounded by Chairman Leonard Hall and administration spokesmen is that the President, if he recovers his health as he seems to be doing, is the indispensable man. One gets the impression that this doctrine is being beamed at the Eisenhoweres fully as much as at the public.

Hall argued to reporters that the President could campaign exclusively by television and so avoid the rigors of the old type of personal campaign. A few minutes later he was saying that there was no substitute for the old-fashioned shoe leather politicking in the precincts. Hall is, of course, exempting his candidate for President from all the old rules and customs.

Little Chance for Debate. The chairman is not giving the committee members much chance to debate with him in private over his bland assumptions. He said that he would report on his visit to the President at a public meeting of the committee today when he would say all he had to say about it.

That meeting was to be brief, with a short speech and lunch to follow after the adjournment. The whole session here is being held to 36 hours.

A few old guard committee members are grumbling in dusty corners about Hall's steamroller, but the vast majority make no complaint. They are either able to believe that Hall's course is wise and right or that the alternatives are too terrible to contemplate.

Few will even discuss the question of whether the public inevitably will re-elect Eisenhower at next year's election. A vice-president widely disapproved of outside the party and not universally admired in it. There are a

Sentiment Growing in Britain To Cancel Visit by Top Russians

Khrushchev, Bulganin Speeches in India Causing Concern in London, Doubtful Queen Would Want to Receive Them.

By WILLIAM H. STONEMAN

The Chicago Daily News-Post-Dispatch Special Radio. Copyright 1955.

LONDON.

SENTIMENT is growing in the British Parliament to cancel the invitation to Russian leaders to visit Britain next spring.

While the Government still appears to stand by the invitation, issued in the light of the Geneva spirit last July, everybody seems to agree on two points:

1. It would be unthinkable for Nikita S. Khrushchev and Nikolai Bulganin to come to this country and make the kind of speeches they have been making in India.

If, for example, they repeated the preposterous slander that "the Western powers turned the German Nazis loose on the Soviet Union in World War II" they would be asked to leave the country immediately.

So there will have to be some kind of advance assurance that they will respect this country's hospitality.

Otherwise the whole thing may end up in a fiasco that would make East-West relations even worse than they are now.

2. The Queen can hardly be expected to receive the Soviet leaders, particularly in view of the things they have said in India. At the same time they probably will expect to be received by her.

Prime Minister Eden, who was responsible for the hasty invitation, has begun to show signs of wondering how to organize the visit. On second thought he also seems to wonder whether it is good for Britain—alone among the Western Big Three—to be putting on such a get-together.

He certainly has every intention of keeping President Eisenhower fully informed of his plans and of what goes on in such a visit.

At the same time the British Government appears determined to test the possibilities of "good old fashioned diplomacy" on a two-party, secret basis as opposed to the conference type of diplomacy, which has failed to produce results.

It is just possible that Eden thinks that, with his experience and powers of persuasion, he can persuade the Russians to make commitments which they refused to make in the recent conference.

Outsiders fail to see how or why they should do so. What they fear is that the Russians may be able to persuade Eden to accept certain ideas which would lead eventually to a division of views between the United States and Britain. They are expected to give special attention to trying to get a European security treaty, without accepting Germany's reunification as a prior condition. They are also bound to talk trade, hoping to secure the lifting of the Western embargo on strategic materials.

They will also certainly press for a bar on nuclear weapons without making any commitment to accept an inspection plan.

The more they examine the proposed get-together the harder it is for non-Communists and non-fellow-travelers to see what good can possibly come from it.

Back on Active Duty

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

It goes without saying that all America included among its thanks-worthy blessings the restoration of President Eisenhower's health and his return to active duty. Amid the alarm and speculation about his illness and its effect on his future we might do well to ponder a few of the advantages.

First, it afforded our Chief Executive a vacation of needed rest—wise thought to be impossible. It prompted a unique demonstration of the high regard he enjoys in national and world esteem. While it served to emphasize the importance of the great office he holds it demonstrated, too, that the democratic process transcends personality. Focusing awareness on the physical hazards inherent in the magnitude of the job, it must also challenge both the President and his aids and the nation at large to the necessity of keeping the tasks involved within the limit of human endurance.

Mr. Eisenhower may choose to retire at the end of his current term but should he consent to be available for another heart attack will but have served to better fit him for the job. C. C. CASE.

I'm happy the President is well back on the road to recovery. I am also glad he has three lovely grandchildren, but do we have to have them seven days a week?

When will people understand that it gets boring to have to listen on and on as folks tell you all about how cute their children are, what they say? You look at their pictures from the time they were born until grown up. And all the while you are wondering how you can get away from it all gracefully. C. BLACK.

Keeping the Voters Awake

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

When foreign policy should be the main issue Senator George wants to keep it out of the campaign. Are the political parties afraid to make it an issue by hiding it under bipartisan label? No wonder most elections turn into name-calling exhibitions. The politicians don't want to fight out the issues so they have to do something to keep the voters awake. Overland. J. E.

A Happy Series

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

Once again the St. Louis Post-Dispatch has been instrumental in improving the community which it reports and serves. I know that the Post-Dispatch does not expect thanks for this kind of activity but rather regards it as a duty.

However, I do want to tell you that those who are active in the St. Louis County Bond Issue campaign realize what a tremendous boost your newspaper gave it and how useless it would have been to attempt to pass the bond issue without your support.

The series of events that have taken place in the last two years—Traffic, Plaza, City Earnings Tax, City Bond Issue, and now County Bond Issue—have shown conclusively that business men, labor and the press, working together, can bring that to the St. Louis area those things that it so badly needs.

It is my belief that this kind of co-operation by all groups can solve the remaining one or two big issues that are holding St. Louis back, in fact, causing business to leave the City. EDWIN M. CLARK.

From the Seventh Floor

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

A 3-year-old child fell the other day from an unguarded window at the Pruitt Homes Housing Project to an asphalt pavement seven floors below. Provisionally a clothesline broke her fall and she escaped death or serious injury.

Many of the windows in the project are dangerously low and unprotected. Months ago I pointed this out in a letter to the director of Public Housing (incidentally, my letter was never acknowledged), but evidently nothing has been done to correct this situation.

The responsible public officials should take immediate steps to prevent a needless tragedy which will inevitably occur unless safeguards are put on these windows. ADELAIDE SCHLAFLY.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

What About Germany Now?

German Chancellor Adenauer's first action after returning to his office from a long stay in the sick room was to threaten the Free Democratic party with ouster from his governing coalition. The Free Democrats have been loudly critical of the Western powers for "not doing enough" for German reunification at Geneva. If they continue to follow that line, says Adenauer, he would rather have them in opposition than on his side of the Bundestag.

Thus Dr. Adenauer has again shown admirable perseverance in his adherence to the Western alliance. Yet the fact that he may have to turn on one of his supporting parties, is another indication of German disappointment at the Geneva stalemate.

Walter Lippmann and George Kennan, well-informed ex-embassy to Moscow, argue cogently that Mr. Dulles and his associates went to Geneva with too rigid a position that negotiation was out of the question. J. F. Golay, former head of the United States Secretariat of the Allied High Commission in Germany, has said:

Of the strong position in which we once stood to control developments in Germany, all that remains to us now is such security as is afforded by the good faith of an estimable but aged politician.

Once the Western powers sanctioned Bonn's rearming—which so far has produced 100 volunteers—they virtually sanctioned the rearming of a reunited Germany, says Mr. Golay. Neither the West nor Moscow, he thinks, dares risk such a Germany outside its security system.

Since West Germany has been granted virtual sovereignty while Russia still has a fairly tight grip on East Germany, the real risk now is that in the absence of a four-power agreement, Bonn may turn to direct negotiations with Moscow. Since the West cannot be sure who will succeed Dr. Adenauer, it must be disturbed by the fact that a considerable portion of the German press—as well as some of Dr. Adenauer's political associates—are more and more openly advocating talks with Moscow. They contend that Article X of the West-approved Bonn constitution makes such negotiations quite legal.

This weakening of the West's hold on the situation, despite all the West has done for German recovery, is the more disturbing because it happened before anything had been accomplished in the way of restoring freedom in East Germany, not to mention other Communist-occupied and Communist-dominated countries.

What can be done? Mr. Golay would make German security the concern of all by putting its defense forces under United Nations control.

Lacking such a formula, hope falls back on cultivation of East-West good will within the framework of national interests. New ideas for cementing good relations with Bonn also are in order. But their full implications had better be pondered before they are put in effect. The West can no longer afford good intentions which backfire.

Let's Know All About Mr. Cross

The transcript of the testimony given in executive session by Hugh W. Cross of Jerseyville, Ill., who resigned as chairman of the Interstate Commerce Commission under fire, should by all means be made public.

Senator McClellan* of Arkansas, chairman, announces that the Senate Permanent Investigating subcommittee will be asked to decide by majority vote when it next meets. If the transcript shows, as Senator McClellan says it will, that no further light could be thrown on Mr. Cross's part in the shifting of a lucrative railroad contract at Chicago to a company headed by a friend of the former ICC chairman, that should end the matter.

But unless it is clear on the face of the testimony that nothing further could be brought out by further public hearings, Senator Symington should, we think, go ahead with his now-tentative proposal that the subcommittee continue digging for the facts.

America's Mark Twain

J. P. Duffy, British consul in St. Louis, was the speaker at a dinner Wednesday in observation of the 120th anniversary of Mark Twain's birth. At first blush it may seem a bit strange to take a newcomer to Missouri, and one from across the ocean at that, and give him the assignment of talking about this State's most outstanding author, and along with a certain former President, Missouri's best-known native son.

Yet the fact is that few Americans are so well-known in other lands as is the creator of Huckleberry Finn and Tom Sawyer. Possibly Premier Bulganin could make a talk about the onetime Mississippi steamboat pilot that would be well worth a Missouri audience. Certainly many Russians could, for Mark Twain is an American favorite of readers in the long nights on the steppes.

All of which leads us to a new book about Mark Twain, compiled by Prof. Arthur L. Scott of the University of Illinois and published by the Southern Methodist University Press. It is a collection of evaluations of Mark Twain's writing and thinking by critics from Bret Harte to Henry Seidel Canby. Prof. Scott is a Mark Twain specialist and he teaches a literature course that centers on Mark Twain. So he is intimately familiar with writing about Mark Twain as well as the writing by him.

The collection is fascinating. Covering almost 90 years, it shows the infinite diversity of views concerning this celebrated son of the little village of Florida (pop. 100), up in Monroe county. Here is Van Wyck Brooks' "Freudian theory" that Mark Twain was a "God-send satirist shanghaied into the business man's paradise" by his wife, who re-established over him "that old Calvinistic spell of his mother's." (Going over the proofs of "Following the Equator.") Mrs. Clemens wrote: "Page 1050, 2nd line from bottom. Change 'breach-clout.' It's a word that you love and I abominate. I would take it and 'offal' out of the language."

To answer Van Wyck Brooks and Harvey O'Higgins, who called Mark Twain a "biological failure" torn by fears and frustrations and an inferiority complex going back to his birth, there is Bernard DeVoto who replied with all the violence of which the late occupant of Harper's Easy Chair was capable. Out of the battle came a landmark book, "Mark Twain's America," an examination of life in Hannibal and the Missouriian's humor as part of the folk art of a people. Here, too, are the other opinions: Ludwig Lewisohn's that he is our national bard, in the blood-line of Homer; Carl Van Doren's that he "loafed through the world something like a comic Whitman"; W. D. Howells's that he was unique in "the power of charming us out of our troubles"; Stuart Sherman's that "robust, big-hearted, gifted with divine power to use words (he) makes us all laugh together, builds true romances with prairie fire and western clay, and shows us that we are at one on all the main points."

Yes, and not just the critics, but the poets, too, for as Editor Scott reminds us, Henry Van Dyke wrote for the Mark Twain public memorial meeting in 1910 in Carnegie Hall:

We know you well, dear Yorick of the West,
The very soul of large and friendly jest.
That loved and mocked the broad grotesque
Of things
In this new world where all the folk are kings.

The Reserve Program Bogs Down

The National Security Training Commission seems at long last to be opening its eyes and concluding that possibly all is not well with the new military reserve program. David Sarnoff, chairman of the commission that was set up by Congress to assist the military services in running the new reserve program, says the program is "getting off to a slower start than we had expected."

That is putting it mildly indeed. The Administration succeeded in launching the new program last August after a hard fight. The leaders in the fight believed that they at last were on the way toward the strong reserve so vital to national defense. The goal is to enlist by June 30 100,000 youths of 17 to 18½ for six months of active duty plus seven and a half years in the reserves. Yet by the end of October only 4500 persons had volunteered.

Mr. Sarnoff explains the slow start by asserting parents and the eligible youths have not been well informed about the new reserve program and its advantages. But the newspapers, the radio, the Army and the veteran reserve units have done a fairly good job of disseminating information on the new program.

A better explanation of the lag in the program might be as follows: There are approximately 1,800,000 young men classified today as 1A for the draft. This manpower pool is growing as the armed forces shrink in size and the draft (averaging 10,000 monthly) decreases as re-enlistments and volunteers slowly count up. Under such conditions it is only natural that many a youth with no hankering to wear a uniform decides that the odds are very good that he never will be drafted.

Mr. Sarnoff has said that he will ask Congress to do something about the situation if the reserve program does not get "off the ground." About all that remains to be asked is for Congress to enact universal military training or something close to it. And the Congressmen, with their ears close to the ground, have been shying away from anything like universal military training since World War II ended. So if the Army cannot make the present program work it appears that there just won't be any more of a reserve than there has been to date.

Comes Jet Turns for Corners

The Daimler-Benz Co. of Stuttgart-Unterturkheim, Germany, received a patent last week for a jet-assisted racing car which would use its exhaust gases to obtain an extra 50 or more horsepower. By directing the jets backward the driver would get additional speed and by aiming them toward the outside of the race track he could use the exhaust streams to brace the car against the centrifugal pull and so give the wheels better road grip. Thus the driver would not have to slow for the curves, according to the inventor. If it works, that's fine for the race track. But remembering that many improvements worked out on the long oval come to roost on the passenger car, it is earnestly to be hoped that this German come-faster-the-corner-arounder is not added to the new models for 1957.

Faure Goes to the French People

References to another French political crisis are hardly adequate to describe the fall of the Faure government. A country which lives in political crisis cannot be plunged into one. Premier Edgar Faure had survived two previous tests of confidence principally because the big Communist bloc in the National Assembly supported his middle-road government, by votes if nothing more. When the Communist vote deserted, the Cabinet was overturned, 318 to 218. But by dragging down the Cabinet, the Assembly actually paved the way for its own end. Under the French Constitution, the Cabinet can dissolve the Assembly if it is the second Cabinet within 18 months to suffer a no-confidence vote by a majority of all Assembly members.

Since former Premier Mendes-France got the ax less than 10 months ago Premier Faure and his colleagues could and did order the Assembly dissolved. Now new elections must be held within 20 to 30 days, and in the meantime Edgar Faure and his Cabinet continue in office.

All the resentment against the government's quagmire in Morocco, all the inter-party bickering over taxes and defense and a new election system, and all the partisan pressures building toward a new national election welled up against Premier Faure.

But the display of disunity did not end with the usual maneuvering of hostile parties. It also involved two leaders of the same party—the Radical Socialists. Thus Premier Faure was pitted against Mendes-France on the question of elections now or later and as a result the party has now expelled Faure.

The Faure government was the twenty-first since the war. Twenty-one governments in less than ten years adds up to a large vote of no confidence in the present form of French government. New governments offer no magic aspirin for so prolonged a political headache. Stability will not make its debut in postwar Paris short of a political reformation.

More Than a Football Coach

All Missouri can take pride in the reaction to efforts by a little hamlet squad to get rid of Don Faurot as the University of Missouri's head football coach.

Coach Faurot and the Tigers have had a tough season. In many states, that would be enough; the hammers would be knocking and the alumni would be hunting for a new coach.

In Missouri, Mr. Faurot's critics have been overwhelmed by a counter-wave of support. The alumni athletic advisory committee has voted unanimously to recommend his retention, and President Elmer Ellis's staunch backing, together with the attitude of curators, faculty, students and 49 members of the football squad, seems to assure this outcome.

Here is much more than a personal tribute to Faurot. What is being registered at Columbia is a vote of confidence in what he stands for—keeping football in proper perspective, for shunning high-pressure recruitment tactics, for making the game an adjunct to rather than a substitute for education, for treating it as a sport and not a business.

Strictly as a football man, who has made original contributions to the development of the game, Coach Faurot can hold his own with anybody. But he also brings something else to the coach's task, and it is for these extra qualities that he has earned such broad support. And that is what Missouri can be proud of.

ONE DAY OR ONE ETERNITY

The Case for the Farmer

The Mirror of Public Opinion

Farmers are angry about declining income and resentful of Secretary Benson, Iowa farmer writes; price supports are not so much at issue as attitude in Agriculture Department; they think farm aid is no more 'socialistic' than federal aid to business.

James Hearst in The Commonweal

The farmers are complaining again. Mass meetings like those of the '20s and '30s are being held in the Midwest to protest falling farm prices and rising farm costs.

The farmers are resentful and afraid and the Department of Agriculture and Secretary Benson are coming in for scathing criticism.

The boom is running smoothly for almost everyone else; employment is at high levels, wages and prices keep inching up, factories face full schedules, dividend payments are high. Why is the farmer headed the other way? Perhaps it is time for the farmer to offer his side of the story.

Three out of five people in the world's population go to bed hungry every night. It is our good luck in the United States to live in a country which can feed us all and feed us well.

The people on the farm who produce this high-standard diet grow smaller in number as their efficiency increases. One hundred years ago the work of five farm people fed themselves and one person in the city. Today, four farm people feed themselves, twelve people in the city and two in another country.

This shift illustrates graphically the effects of machine power, hybrid seeds, fertilizer techniques and improved management of human and soil resources. It also helps to explain the problem of surpluses.

Farmers Mired in Surpluses

The accumulation of more food and fiber than we can use is one aspect of the farm problem, but only one. According to a Federal Reserve Bank report of 1953, the people who derive most of their income from working the land constitute about 15.5 per cent of the total population. But these farmers, even with the addition of money received from Government price supports, are paid only 6 per cent of the national income. In terms of income agriculture is a declining industry.

In September, 1955, Business Conditions—a review issued by the Chicago branch of the Federal Reserve Board—summed up the situation neatly: "The farm operator with his wagon deeply mired in surplus supplies," it said, "reluctantly watches the business boom roll by. After four years of continuous decline farm operators' net income is now 27 per cent below its 1951 peak."

For one thing, the American farmer is at the mercy of forces, both man-made and natural, which are beyond his control. Like all producers of raw material, he is the victim of a kind of reverse business practice where he seems to sell at wholesale and buy at retail.

Short End of Consumers' Dollar

The farmer receives less than half of the dollar (about 47 cents) which the customer in a grocery store spends for his bread and butter. But when he buys a tractor or commercial fertilizer, he buys from a local dealer at the full retail price. And the spread in price between what the farmer receives and the consumer pays is widening as people ask for more processing.

The farmer's chief virtue, which also seems to be his principal bugbear, is his long tradition of conservatism, were not pleased when James A. McConnell, new head of the Commodity Stabilization Service, referred to "this program which is into the final step of Socialism."

This is nonsense, and the farmers know it. The question is: Do the people in the city know it too?

Tariff laws are based on the principle that if the general welfare requires it, certain interests are entitled to Government help and protection. With this principle in mind, the farmer felt justified in asking for a federal farm loan.

He knew that aid was often extended to shipping and manufacturing interests when the general welfare was in question. If a subsidy is not "creeping Socialism" when used to further some business interest, he decided, farming should be protected in the same way.

The farmer bases his argument for Government assistance on his record of production. This assurance of enough food and fiber to supply the nation through good times and bad is a national asset of incalculable worth.

A steady and dependable supply of food and clothing is one of the benefits the consumer receives for the taxes he pays in support of farm prices. He is entitled to know what his money is spent for and how much the farm program costs him. But the farmer would like to know how much it is worth to the customer to know that he will not go to bed hungry.

The price of farm products is not, of course, set by the farmer. He must accept what the market will pay him. Since changes in production cause large shifts in price, he needs to have the peaks and valleys of prices somewhat leveled out. The citizen who helps support farm programs with his taxes is giving his assistance in this task.

Figures concerning the cost of the farm program have often been distorted. A late release by the United States Department of Agriculture shows that one hour of factory labor in 1929 would buy 64 loaves of bread; in 1954 it would buy 10.6 loaves. The city dweller is spending considerably less of his work time earning his food now than he did 25 years ago.

The problem of surpluses is one that plagues administrators of farm programs. One view is that surpluses hang like a threat over the market and depress prices. The other maintains that the surpluses are good business, that we need reserves of food.

Resentment among farmers in the Middle West centers largely on Secretary Benson. Rightly or wrongly, they consider him indifferent and unsympathetic. When Senator Humphrey charged Mr. Benson with acting like the "president of a private bank instead of a public servant," he expressed the feeling of many Corn Belt farmers.

In spite of the public debate on this point it is not a question of flexible vs. fixed support prices; farm prosperity will not be determined by such limited techniques. It is the attitude they think they detect in the Department of Agriculture which disturbs many farmers.

They resent the unpublished interest hike from 3 to 5 per cent on FHA "disaster loans." And farmers, with their long tradition of conservatism, were not pleased when James A. McConnell, new head of the Commodity Stabilization Service, referred to "this program which is into the final step of Socialism."

Whence Japan and Whither

JAPAN'S MODERN CENTURY, by Hugh Borton.

The story of modern Japan begins with the opening of this island empire to world trade, commerce, and diplomacy by Commodore Perry in July of 1853. The change from that of isolation par excellence to that of world importance took the Japanese islands just one century. It has been a radical change. And it is still going on. The Japanese intend to remain leaders in their sphere of influence.

It is this century of change which Hugh Borton tells with remarkable clarity in "Japan's Modern Century." The author is professor of Japanese and director of the East Asian Institute at Columbia University. Coming from his pen, this latest study of these islands is especially rewarding. Dr. Borton has been studying and writing about Japan and the Japanese since 1938.

Dr. Borton's account runs the gamut of Japan's modernization. The book begins with a look at the several distinct governmental approaches in Japan at the time of Perry's visit. It continues with a study of the Meiji Government's formation of a centralized monarchy, the establishment of Japan's empire around the turn of the century, and Japan's emergence as a world power in the twentieth century.

Prof. Borton ends with an extensive account of Japan's preparation for war, the war itself, and Japan in defeat. The average American is poorly versed in Asiatic history. Indeed, there are few who can pay more than lip service to the history of these islands off the eastern rim of Asia.

As a result, Prof. Borton's book is an especially welcome addition to the growing shelf of works on Japan. Dr. Borton draws heavily upon the most competent sources in both English and Japanese. He mentions his reliance upon Sir George B. Sansom's pioneer work in Japanese history and historiography. But of even greater importance, as he shows, is his use of Japanese-language materials.

Prof. Borton has touched upon one subject which might well seem overdone. In detailing Japan's history of Japanese-American relations have overlooked America's Manifest Destiny policy as a factor in sending Perry to Yokohama Harbor. Actually, as the author relates, Japan was a vacuum in 1853 toward which the United States was being drawn. The rapid westward expansion of the United States, its belief in Manifest Destiny . . . indicated that America was likely to play the decisive role in this drama," the author writes.

The size of the book and its scholarly approach may scare away some readers. Nevertheless, in detailing Japan's history from Perry to MacArthur, Prof. Borton has made a valuable contribution to our literature on those islands. This analysis of Japan's modern century goes far toward answering our questions about Japan's future.

Snakes Can Be Pets

THE REPTILE WORLD, by Clifford H. Post.

(Knopf, $7.50.)

Do you know why the tautara is among the most remarkable of reptiles? Or how snakes should be cared for as pets? Or how long a crocodile can stay under water without drowning? Mr. Post gives the answers to these and a thousand similar questions in this fascinating and encyclopedic book about reptiles. The tautara (not to be confused with the tautara, a living fossil, a lonesome remnant of the age of dinosaurs, now found only in New Zealand. As for crocodiles, they can stay submerged up to five hours at a time. Mr. Post deals with every known species, describing its life and its habits as a museum curator. There is, in fact, a vast fund of information here about reptiles, with hundreds of unusual photographs to lend force to the text.

THOMAS L. STOKES

Better Keep an Eye on Dewey

WASHINGTON.

THE APPARENT QUIET in the Republican party about its 1956 ticket is somewhat deceptive. The surface calm is enforced, as we know, by keeping alive a belief that the President may run again.

To that National Republican Chairman Leonard Hall made his contribution this week after his first visit to the President the latter was stricken in Denver two months ago. So long as the President's availability is kept unsettled, aspirants for his mantle must keep their heads down, and this is part of the plot, as reported here some days ago. In this way the stanch Eisenhower wing of the party hopes to keep control until it can settle on a candidate.

Dewey

But this lid is beginning to rattle nervously under the pressure of the planning and scheming that is going on among aspirants for the Republican nomination and their friends and managers. Many a fantastic maneuver is being hatched and discussed by which, if the President declares himself out, a nomination for President or Vice President might be brought about. In this fever and fret, which belies the surface calm, anything can seem possible.

Ready and Waiting.

Because he is Vice President, Richard M. Nixon still occupies the favored spot publicly and his friends are active behind the scenes on an "if and when" basis. Their object is to have him in the White House itself, in Sherman Adams, chief assistant to the President, who is not a Nixon-for-President fan. And he is very influential with the President.

Senator William F. Knowland, from California like the Vice President, is restlessly waiting for the President's decision. He is ready to announce his own candidacy for the nomination the minute the President takes himself out.

Meanwhile the old Senator Taft wing of the party is beginning to look to the Senate's party leader and it is also beginning to express itself in new organizations and in a magazine.

Some in the Eisenhower wing of the party are counting heavily on the possibility that the President, if he does not run, can persuade, Chief Justice Earl Warren to accept a nomination. This is among the fantastic ideas, since the Chief Justice has said as plainly as the English language can say it that he will not run. But this doesn't stop the plotters.

The Dr. Milton Eisenhower boom has created some organized activity but only on a small scale thus far.

Missing from recent speculation is a figure who should not be overlooked in what is going on behind the scenes.

Have we all forgotten the man who, perhaps more than any other, was responsible for the Eisenhower nomination and who, before that, was himself twice the Republican candidate for President and who, the last time he ran—in 1948—was the victim of an upset?

Don't we remember Thomas E. Dewey, three times Governor of New York?

We'd better. For he is aware of himself as a potential candidate and so is that inner circle of lieutenants who served him when he was in public office and a contender for the presidency.

A Three-Time Runner.

Once they were virtually certain—and right up to election day in November 1948—that they were going to run things here in Washington. Some of them already had picked out their jobs and had rented homes. They still have to come here.

Tom Dewey has hopes that he might get the nod from the man he helped to the presidency if Mr. Eisenhower doesn't feel he should run again, and thus do what William Jennings Bryan did—which is to run for President three times.

After all, whoever is the Republican candidate very likely will be running against a man who will be doing it a second time—Adlai Stevenson.

What some in the Dewey circle are pinning their hopes on, is reported, is a battle between two Californians, Vice President Nixon and Chief Justice Warren, which would end in a deadlock that the President then would have to resolve.

And what better way to resolve it than by looking to the key state of New York—and tapping Tom Dewey?

Some of the steam behind the revived boom for Chief Justice Warren is said to be coming from the Dewey circle and the fact that he is the encouragement for the Vice President.

Fantastic? It sounds so. Yet there is nothing more fantastic than the dreams and schemes inspired by the big White House on Pennsylvania avenue. You don't dare believe all you hear—and yet it may be true.

signs are strongly influenced by modern masters of painting, but serigraphy's diverse color effects are ingeniously exploited to produce a brilliant show. It lights up the dull corridor with cheerful warmth and gaiety.

Geno Pettit's "Yearling Colt" utilizes Fernand Leger's device of color areas existing independently of contour lines. Ginger Osgood's bright and witty "Gower Street" has a Dufy-like shorthand quality. Roger Hollenbeck's "Trio," marked by geometric discipline of form and a limited green-and-gray palette, recalls Georges Braque.

Interpretation of music in color is attempted in Dorothy Bowman's rich, warm "Song." Hollenbeck's deliberately dissonant "Small Combo" and Eugene Chodorow's "Entertainers," a composition of musicians' figures in muted tones, enveloped in darkness except for high-keyed passages in tinkling yellows.

Others represented are Mary Asher, Howard Bradford, Robert Brown, Dean Dallin, Mario de Ferrante, Norma Flynn, Lathrop Gay, Thomas Laursen, Guy Maccow, Lee Purcell and Gabi Wasow. The show will close Dec. 22.

Wright's design of a Pleasantville (N. Y.) residence makes the structure almost a part of the earth itself. A romantic-looking, medieval wall hugs the slope of a hill, and the rounded house is reminiscent of a gnarled old tree that has been on the spot for years.

Van Der Rohe, by contrast, has designed an ethereally light Plano (Ill.) home apparently hanging in air. This illusion is conveyed by extensive use of glass and steel. A wide open space intervenes between the ground and the house, which is suspended from steel columns by welded joints, instead of resting conventionally on columns.

Ex-St. Louisian Represented. Related to the work of Van Der Rohe is a Santa Monica (Calif.) house built for his own use by Charles Eames, former St. Louisian best known as a furniture designer. Cage-like, with emphasis on details of industrial design, it shares with several of the other new pervasiveness a subtle but persistent influence from traditional domestic architecture of Japan.

Photography throughout the exhibit is of extraordinary high quality. Nine of the prints, including three of the Wright house and others of a home designed by Igor Polevitsky of Miami, are the work of Ezra Stoller of New York, brother of Claude Stoller, assistant professor of architecture at Washington University.

Other noted architects represented include Richard Neutra, Marcel Breuer, Philip Johnson, Raphael Soriano, Rudolph and Twitchell, Soleri & Mills, Schweikher & Elting. The show will close Dec. 18.

PHILOSOPHY GUMS UP 'PIPE DREAM' MUSICAL

Helen Traubel Wonderfully Game in Rodgers-Hammerstein Show.

By WALTER F. KERR
The New York Herald Tribune Post-Dispatch Special Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Dec. 1.—In a forthright song called "The Man I Used To Be," the handsome, bearded hero of "Pipe Dream," which opened at the Shubert last night, tells us he isn't having much fun any more because he's "got a mission now."

I wonder if something strangely similar isn't beginning to happen to Rodgers and Hammerstein. All through the thoroughly possible new musical the authors seem unable to keep their minds on cheerfulness. Philosophy keeps breaking in.

Right off the bat there's a sturdy, but fairly sober, number explaining that the lowest creatures of the sea are all vitally necessary to somebody. This is immediately followed by a further tribute to our turbulent hard-shelled friends in "The Tide Pool," pointing out that if you look close enough you can see the "Stupid Sons of Fishes Louping Up The Sea."

Identity by Inhalation. A little later Helen Traubel, the St. Louis singer, helps push along the love story by convincing a wayward and frightened lass that, since she can walk by the sea and inhale the good, fresh air, she does have some sort of identity.

Every bit of this, it should be quickly said, is accomplished by light, deft, sometimes wonderfully melodic improvisations by Richard Rodgers. And sometimes the music is able to take such firm hold of the proceedings that genuine gaiety rears its welcome head. As a trumpet blares out the giddy notes of a "Bums' Opera," a spindly noogie in red suspenders, bandana, blue flannel shirt and obtrusive long winter underwear manages to set the stage whirling. When the heroine, out on her first "legitimate" date, gets helpful hints in department from the orchestra, the old R. & H. sparkle is in evidence once more. The spectacle of Helen Traubel as a local madam sitting picturesquely among her girls and wishing everybody a Merry Christmas "From Our House" is winning indeed.

But the frolicsome moments are rare: the story of how a bunch of the easygoing madmen of Monterey get together to help their scientific pal "Doc" get both a microscope and a wife is told at a sluggish pace, virtually in a dead-end, and in a staid, straight-disposed style that seems light-miles away from the raffish and roaring Steinbeck original. Nor is there sustained emotional interest to take up the slack.

There is no lack of professional polish. Jo Mielziner's sketched-in drawings for the Bear Flag, Cage and neighboring institutions are airy and attractive. The Oscar Hammerstein lyrics are superbly efficient even when they are insisting that life is real, life is earnest.

Bill Johnson struts vigorously in his floppy boots and sings with effortless simplicity the already popular "All at Once."

Mr. Gruen, 79 years old, died of a heart ailment Sunday at Lutheran Hospital. He designed many public buildings and as architect for the City Water Department designed the sunken garden at old Reservoir Park. He also prepared displays for the St. Louis World's Fair. Mr. Gruen lived at 3642 Aldine avenue.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Minnie Gebhard Gruen; a daughter, Mrs. Geraldine Leonard, and two sisters, Mrs. Ruth Hauser and Miss Olive Gruen.

FORMER PRESIDENT HARRY S. TRUMAN being greeted on his arrival at Union Station for an address this evening before annual banquet of National Council of Catholic Youth at Hotel Statler. SCHIEDER of Washington and MSGR. LLOYD H. SULLIVAN.

You Love Her." Helen Traubel, possibly miscast as a hearty, rip-snorting mother to all men, is wonderfully game. If the red shoes, riotous earrings and heavily fringed gowns fall to seem native to her, she still has a twinkle for a tune like "The Happiest House on the Block" and the right sort of heart for a lighter job called "Suzy Is a Good Thing." Judy Tyler is pretty and spirited as a girl who may have to spend the night in an old boiler and she makes a very nice thing out of "Everybody's Got a Home but Me."

The people are capable, the material keeps promising to turn into a party, but someone seems to have forgotten to bring along that gallon jug of good, red wine.

He was here in the interests of the Truman Library project, and to address the third national convention of the National Council of Catholic Youth at a banquet at Hotel Statler tonight.

The former President was greeted by a large gathering of leaders of the Catholic youth group, on his arrival at Union Station at noon. The group included Msgr. Joseph Schieder of Washington, director of the youth division of the National Catholic Welfare Council.

Truman declined to answer reporters' questions on political matters, saying:

"This trip is strictly non-political. Later on, I'll be back and give you a talk on politics."

A large number of St. Louis business and professional leaders joined Truman at a luncheon at the Statler, and heard from the former President a progress report on the Truman Library, which is under construction at Independence, Mo.

The luncheon was given by Mark R. Holloran, Democratic national committeeman for Missouri.

About 25 guests attended, including Rear Adm. Sidney W. Souers (ret.), a director of General American Life Insurance Co. and McDonnell Aircraft Corp.; former Missouri Supreme Court Judge James M. Douglas; Sidney Salomon Jr., former treasurer of the Democratic National Committee; United States District Judge Roy W. Harper; Dillon J. UNUSUAL OLD TOYS, DOLLS ON DISPLAY

Historical Society Exhibiting Items Through Christmas at Jefferson Memorial.

Unusual old toys and dolls from collections of the Missouri Historical Society went on display today in Martin Lammet gallery in the east wing of Jefferson Memorial, Forest Park. The exhibit will be open daily without charge until Jan. 15.

One of the rare toys on display is a hand-carved wooden merry-go-round, complete with decorated horses and dolls and with a red and white striped circular awning. The toy is powered by a stream of sand which turns the wheels in a way similar to an old-fashioned grist mill.

Charles van Ravenswaay, director of the society, said the toy is being exhibited for the first time, and probably was made in pre-Civil War days.

A special case of items of interest to boys includes a cast iron fire engine of the 1870s, a family touring car, a replica of a 1905 model machine and auto bus of the same year, cast iron banks, wooden puzzles and a miniature tool chest of the 1880s.

There are dolls of many sizes and descriptions with heads of wax, porcelain, wood, papier-mache and corn husks. One of the dolls has the appearance of happiness or sadness, depending on which side is turned under a cap. It is dressed in pantaloons, petticoats and other garments of the last century.

Other toys on exhibit include boxed figures of men who do a jerky dance when their sand-powered mechanism is put in motion by tipping the box; a massive Queen Anne-styled doll house about five feet long, a profile of a large furnished Victorian house, doll dishes; a kitchen display, hand-carved ivory chess men and wooden checkers, wooden birds, a tin ferris wheel and others.

Also displayed around the gallery are Christmas tree ornaments and other holiday accessories, games, cards and books colorfully assembled. Special tours of the exhibition can be arranged for school classes or other children's groups by calling the society's educational department, Forest 7-9265.

PROFIT-TAKING IN KEY STOCKS, PRICES OFF

Handful of Individual Shares, However, Score Good Gains.

NEW YORK, Dec. 1 (AP)—Prices staged a mild retreat in the stock market today. Profit-taking in the blue chip issues was responsible for much of the decline, but losses were rarely severe. Some individual issues fared to the upside with fairly wide gains. Generally, price changes were limited to about a point, either way. They started the day on a higher note, but began to drift lower in late morning. The pace of trading was slow. There were 454 advancing issues and 493 which declined, against 1200 yesterday. There were 30 new highs for the year and 28 new lows.

Classes running from fractions to around a point peppered almost all major districts of the market. Ralls were down uniformly except for Lehigh Valley which slipped around a point. Most were fractional losses although Union Pacific lost around two points.

The United Press said "Katy" preferred ran up nearly 3 points on reports the company would ask for tenders on the New York.

Dow-Jones average of 30 industrial stocks was 1.87 points lower at 481.39 at the close, the 20 utilities 1.37 at 165.28 and the 15 utilities 65.84 down .08.

Associated Press average of 30 stocks closed down 8 points at 180.2. The 20 utilities lost 3 points, rails 8 of point and utilities 1 point.

Volume contracted to 2,370,000 shares from 2,900,000 yesterday. Airlines still hung to the upside as fractional gains were made by Pan American World Airways, American Airlines, United and Eastern Airlines. Dills made gains up to around a point.

American Bosch traded unchanged on a block of 10,000 shares, later gained fractionally. Babcock & Wilcox rose a point on news of its stock dividend then lost a fraction of the gain.

Volume for the day was estimated at around 2,500,000 shares compared with 2,900,000 yesterday.

FEED GRAIN HIGHER ON CHICAGO BOARD

Lower Price Range.

CHICAGO, Dec. 1 (AP)—Corn had a firm tone on the Board of Trade today while other cereals backed and filled in an erratic manner. New crop wheat futures eased. At one time the entire market was ahead. But wheat, oats and soybeans fell back toward the finish. Gains in corn were reduced.

Firmness in cash corn was a major prop under yellow cereal futures. Soybeans responded only mildly to a boost in cash bean meal prices to the best level in about two weeks.

Selling pressure in new crop wheat was attributed to snow or rains in parts of the winter wheat belt.

There were heavy deliveries of cash grain on December futures and this tempered buying enthusiasm. On wheat deliveries totaled 525,000 bushels, on corn 3,360,000 bushels, on oats 1,295,000 bushels and on rye 239,000 bushels.

WATCHING DECEMBER RETAIL PACE

By Sam Dawson

NEW YORK, Dec. 1 (AP).

SANTA CLAUS takes over today as business moves into the final month of what's sure to be its biggest year. In December emphasis is always on retail trade. One-fourth of the entire year's sales volume will be done between now and Christmas.

Sam Dawson

But that doesn't mean that many manufacturing industries will be taking time off this year. The industrial output pace is expected to keep on gaining. And by the first of the year the nation's total output of goods and services may nudge the 400 billion dollar a year mark for the first time in history.

Many companies and some of the most important industries will be hampered more by lack of capacity than by any decline in the backlog of orders. Capacity or near capacity production is reported in the steel and auto industries. The railroads are slowed more by lack of enough freight cars than anything else.

OTHER INDUSTRIES, PARTICULARLY THOSE using metals, report their chief problem now is material shortages or delays in deliveries from metal producers. There is wide belief that December will see many companies still thriving, with only moderate success, to build up inventories. Some are betting that the Federal Reserve Board's index of industrial production, which hit a record 142 in September and October, will push to 144 this month, helped in part by this urge to build inventories. The index uses the 1947-49 output average as its base of 100. Retail trade starts the month off with a bang. Sales volume is already at least 7 per cent higher than a year ago. Most merchants think this year's Christmas trade will top last year's by 10 per cent—and the comparison is with a booming month, because last December saw business already well along on the comeback trail.

LOTS OF THE BUYING THIS MONTH will be on the cuff. Installment credit, other than auto time-buying, already is near the 13 billion dollar mark, up 10 per cent over a year ago. And many merchants are pushing this type of business. December, however, could see a slowdown in two of the economy's props. Bad weather, and a credit pinch, could cause a further drop in the number of new homes that are started. And while auto production apparently will continue at its present record pace, there is some doubt that sales can keep step with output. Some of the less optimistic think that in December the stocks of new cars in dealers' hands may climb back to the 1955 peak of 700,000 set at the start of this year.

BUT SANTA CLAUS IS GOING TO HAVE PLENTY of presents for businessmen and investors. Profit totals are setting records for many corporations. Year-end dividends for stockholders are likely to set a record, too. The chances of a record volume of Christmas bonuses for employees are very good. The exchange of gifts among businessmen, their clients and their suppliers is expected to hit new peaks. December looks like a rip-roaring—if only the weatherman will behave.

BUSINESS GOOD BUT ALSO SHOWS FEW DARK SPOTS

November Auto Output
Price Sag in Eighth District.

Business in general was good last month in the Eighth Federal Reserve District but some "somer hues" were mixed in with the rosy ones, the Federal Reserve Bank of St. Louis reported in its monthly review, published today.

Automobiles were produced faster than they were sold, and the stocks of most dealers rose sharply, with some 1955 models still in the hands of a few dealers. The report noted that production usually is stepped up after a change of models, to supply the dealers, but the output this year was exceptionally large.

Industrial Expansion. One of the brightest parts of the economy was the industrial sector, and in some industries the current and expected demand was so great that expansion of capacity was started.

Recently announced expansion plans were in production of steels, chemicals, automobiles, appliances, kraft paper, electric motors and furniture.

Consumer spending, listed as "one of the main factors behind the current upswing of business activity," continued at a high rate, resulting in more than seasonal gains in department store sales. In the first three weeks of November those sales averaged 10 per cent higher than in the corresponding weeks last year.

Decline in Farm Prices.

Farm prices presented a darker side of the picture. Total production of crops was estimated to be 15 to 20 per cent over last year, but because of sharp drops in prices farm income for the first nine months of this year was 8 per cent less than in those months of 1954.

In the four weeks ended Nov. 18, prices received for agricultural products dropped 3 per cent to a level nearly 10 per cent less than a year ago.

Cattle prices dropped 8 per cent and hog prices 17 per cent, while prices of other livestock products and field crops were stable or higher.

SHIPPERS LOOK FOR CARLOADING HIKE EARLY IN '56

First Quarter to Be Nearly 3 Pct. Better Than Same '55 Period, Board Predicts.

Freight carloadings in the Middle West will increase nearly 3 per cent in the first quarter of 1956, as compared with the corresponding period this year, the Trans-Missouri Kansas Shippers Board forecast here today.

Anticipated carloadings for the three months should total 324,378, including beverage and packing house products, it was announced by Paul M. Ashe, general secretary of the board. That would be an increase of 8,000 over the first quarter of this year.

Ashe, who is traffic supervisor for the A.G.T. division of Westinghouse Corp. at Kansas City, reported at a two-day meeting of the board at Hotel DeSoto. The forecast, considered a significant business index, enables railroads to spot freight cars strategically to take care of expected demand.

The T-M-K Board is a voluntary organization composed of more than 1800 industrialists and shippers from Missouri, Kansas, Illinois, Arkansas and Oklahoma. About 400 persons are attending the meeting here, which ends today. There are 13 such regional groups co-operating with railroads over the nation.

Breakdown of Predictions.

In its forecast for the first quarter of 1956, the board predicted an increase in shipments of 19 of 30 standard commodity classifications, no change in six, and decreases in the remainder, compared with experience in early 1955.

Coal and coke, the largest single commodity classification to be handled, should show an increase of 7.7 per cent, it was said. This would call for a loading of 54,568 cars, an increase of 3809.

The second largest number of carloadings in the territory, which involves all of Missouri and Kansas and portions of the other three states, is expected to be in flour, meal and other mill products. This category should account for 43,473 carloadings, an increase of 1286 cars or 2.9 per cent, it was predicted.

Other commodities in which increases were expected follow: Gravel, sand and stone; automobiles and trucks; lumber and forest products; fertilizers; brick and clay products; lime and plaster; hay, straw and alfalfa; sugar, syrup and molasses; iron, steel and other metals; machinery and boilers; vehicle parts; paper and related products; chemicals and explosives, and potatoes.

Decreases on Grain. Decreases were anticipated in carloadings of grain, cotton, petroleum and by-products, and packing house products.

Harold F. Hammond of Washington, D.C., executive vice president of the Transportation Association of America, told a luncheon meeting that the nation's carriers needed "fair regulation, fair taxes and less Government competition and interference."

He called attention to the report of the Presidential Advisory Committee on Transport Policy and Organization, and said: "Shippers and the general public are in a position to tip the scales, in 1956, on proposed legislation affecting carriers one way or another."

Eugene W. Coughlin of Washington, D.C., with the car service division of the Association of American Railroads, asked in an address this morning that midwestern shippers and receivers of freight help ease the current shortage of freight cars by co-operating with railroads in getting maximum service out of the present fleet.

Coughlin said railroads either had ordered, or planned to order, 145,000 new freight cars by the end of this year. In November alone, he said, 85,000 new cars were ordered at a cost of $750,000,000. He said the total investment in new equipment would be $1,250,000,000.

In the months just ahead, Coughlin said, railroads and shippers should work as a "team" to prevent freight car shortages. Explaining the failure to order the new rolling stock earlier, he recalled that in 1954 daily freight car surpluses ran as high as 141,000, and as late as last March there was an average daily surplus of 38,000 cars.

NEBRASKA FARMER HAS RATTLESNAKE ROUNDUP

SUTHERLAND, Neb. (UP)—Nearly 100 rattlesnakes were killed in three days at the Glenn Elfeldt farm near here.

The Elfeldts killed 37 rattlers the first day they discovered them in an abandoned prairie dog town, just 80 rods from the farm house. Kills on two other days brought the total to 96, and the rattlers still hadn't been cleaned out.

ANOTHER LOCKHEED PRODUCTION RECORD

New jet trainer built in 135 days

Lockheed's production proficiency was again dramatically demonstrated by the roll-out of the U.S. Navy's new T2V-1—in only 135 working days from start of structural work!

The T2V-1* was evolved, in close co-operation with the Navy, from the deep experience gained by Lockheed in producing over 4,500 T-33A jet trainers for the U.S. Air Force. In fact, all jet training planes now in operational use by the U.S. armed services were built by Lockheed.

And because Lockheed has the T2V-1 production line in being, all branches of the U.S. armed services are assured of being able to get the latest and the best jet trainers in the shortest possible time—modified to suit the special requirements of each.

Why the T2V-1 is world's safest jet trainer: Slowest-landing high-performance jet ever built; lands at less than 90 knots, yet flies at close to 500 knots. The first U.S. plane ordered into production embodying Boundary Layer Control, the T2V-1 also employs aerodynamically actuated slats on the wing's leading edge to increase low-speed stability. Instructor's seat higher than student's assures maximum-vision for landings and take-offs. High-capacity landing gear will withstand terrific punishment incurred during early training landings.

WOMAN IS KILLED IN HIGHWAY CRASH

Auto Skids on Illinois Road, Overturns—3 Hurt.

Mrs. Mary Fisher, 741 Veronica avenue, East St. Louis, was killed yesterday when the automobile in which she was riding skidded, went out of control and overturned several times on Illinois Highway 163, a half-mile south of Millstadt.

Seriously injured was Mrs. Joseph Kmiecik, 1113 St. Clair avenue, East St. Louis, who suffered head and back injuries. William R. Baker, 1019 Fourth street, Venice, the driver, and Paul Jackson, 1706A Chouteau avenue, St. Louis, also suffered head injuries. All were taken to St. Elizabeth Hospital.

Baker told Illinois state police he lost control of the car when he saw two automobiles coming toward him, one in the wrong traffic lane. Baker said his automobile skidded off the highway and overturned several times. The accident occurred at 4:15 p.m.

Mrs. Fisher, 42 years old, died in the emergency room of St. Elizabeth Hospital, Belleville, of head and chest injuries shortly after the accident.

Addressing a prayer meeting at Third Baptist Church, 620 North Grand boulevard, the Rev. Dr. Adams, who recently returned from a 3500-mile tour of Russia, said: "It can never be taken for granted that Christ's cause will win unless you and I do our part."

Declaring that graduates of Russian universities, besides being trained in the arts and sciences, are "missionaries of materialistic, atheistic Communism," he urged the audience to develop a faith "backed up with evangelism—with world mission work."

The Russian Baptists with whom he spoke "believe in their hearts that the United States people want peace," he reported. He said the 520,000 Baptists in Russia continue to practice their religion despite the government's attempts to make religion seem outmoded.

HARRIMAN SHOTS TURKEY ON VISIT AT ALABAMA ESTATE

McINTOSH, Ala., Dec. 1 (UP)—New York Gov. Averell Harriman shot a 22-pound turkey before breakfast today and participated in the old hunting ritual of whacking off Alabama Gov. James E. Folsom's shirt-tail for missing a shot at a gobbler.

The two Governors were enjoying a "non-political" visit to the estate of Representative Frank Boykin (Dem.), Alabama. They took off early across the huge plantation and game preserve for a round of turkey shooting before a deer hunt later in the day. The weather was clear and cold.

Harriman returned to the hunting lodge sitting on the front fender of a station wagon.

The New York Governor, who is being mentioned as a candidate for the Democratic presidential nomination, then helped Boykin snip off Folsom's shirt-tail as punishment for firing at

After a quail breakfast, the party took off to the deer stand on Boykin's 100,000-acre estate.

PATROL CAR EMERGENCY: POLICE RADIO BREAKS DOWN

Policemen in patrol cars followed emergency procedure for an hour yesterday, when the transmitter of the police radio station, KAB246, broke down.

Officers in patrol and scout cars checked with the various districts by telephone in the period of no radio communication, between 4:30 and 5:30 p.m.

There were no major incidents which would have required that a mobile radio transmitter be placed in operation.

CAB Orders Special Air Crew Training and Escape Equipment

Agency Says Need Was Indicated in Accident Inquiries—Proper Co-ordination Reported Lacking Now.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 1 (AP)—The Civil Aeronautics Board has ordered scheduled and non-scheduled airlines to give their air crews special training for emergencies and to install certain escape equipment.

The CAB this week issued a series of civil air regulations amendments requiring that the training be put in force within six months and the new equipment put in place within 18 months.

The agency said the need for these new steps was indicated in the course of investigations of several air accidents. Affected are lines operating within the continental United States and abroad.

The CAB said it had learned that "in certain instances crew duties are not sufficiently delineated and crew training programs are not sufficiently complete to provide proper co-ordination of the crew in the event of a crash landing or ditching."

The board ruled that after May 31, 1956, each airline must:

1. Assign emergency functions to be performed by each crew member in the event of plane evacuation.
2. Brief all passengers orally, before any extended over-water flights, on the operation of life vests and emergency exits and the location of life rafts.

Effective next Jan. 1, outside surfaces of each passenger plane must be marked to identify clearly all the required emergency exits.

The board decreed that after May 31, 1957:

1. All emergency exits must be marked conspicuously.
2. For night operations a source of light, with an emergency supply independent of the main lighting system, must be installed to illuminate all emergency exit markings. The lights must be designed to function automatically in a crash landing and also to operate manually.

3. All life rafts, life vests, and signaling devices—required equipment in over-water flights—must be easily accessible in the event of a ditching and must be installed in conspicuously marked locations.

4. A survival kit, appropriately equipped for the route to be flown, must be attached to each life raft.

FOREIGN POLICY TO BE ISSUE SAYS KEFAUVER

He Asserts 'Grave Mistakes' by Administration Will Be Pointed Out by Democrats.

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla., Dec. 1 (UP)—Senator Estes Kefauver of Tennessee said today that Democrats will point to the Administration's handling of foreign policy during the 1956 political campaign.

Kefauver, a prospective candidate for the Democratic presidential nomination, said that "constructive criticism" of the Administration's handling of foreign affairs will be a "necessary" part of the 1956 campaign.

"Democrats will not sink to the level of Republican attacks on President Truman or former Secretary of State Dean Acheson," Kefauver said. "No responsible Democrat will refer to the Republican party as a party of treason. But Republicans are making mistakes—and very grave ones—in the administration and conduct of our foreign affairs at a crucial time in world history. And we Democrats will point to those mistakes in order that they can be corrected by the voters."

Critics Aid Cuts. Kefauver criticized the Administration also for cutting back economic aid to Southeast Asia and elsewhere while Russia was preparing a new economic and political offensive.

"It will be no wonder that when the Democrats return to power in the White House in 1956 that a sign of relief will rise from the foreign offices of every friendly nation in the world," he said.

Addressing the national convention of Young Democrats, Kefauver said, "We will point to the lack of imagination, the lack of resourcefulness, in meeting new conditions in world affairs."

"Sterile Inflexibility." "We will point to the bumbling, the vagueness, the indecision and in many cases the sterile inflexibility which has come to characterize the conduct of our foreign affairs."

Kefauver said, "There have been some recent pious expressions of hope by Republican leaders that foreign policy will not be an issue in the current campaign."

"But," he said, "I agree with Senator George (chairman Walter F. George (Dem., Georgia) of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee) that constructive discussion of foreign policy is as necessary as it will be inevitable."

Kefauver said last night he wants to avoid engaging in personality disputes with other prospective Democratic opponents. He said in an interview, "I am anxious to unify the party and save ammunition to use against the Republicans."

He repeated that he will make his decision about running later this month or early in January. He added that he has received "substantial encouragement" from Democratic leaders and "many of my old friends."

Kefauver was the first of the big name Democrats to arrive for the three-day convention. Adlai Stevenson, the party's presidential nominee in 1952 and the only announced candidate thus far for 1956, will arrive tomorrow for a brief appearance. Gov. Averell Harriman of New York, another presidential possibility, will be the speaker at a windup banquet Saturday night.

Asked to comment on Stevenson's speech in Chicago in which moderation was urged as party policy for the presidential campaign and which drew sharp criticism from Gov. G. Mennen Williams of Michigan, Kefauver said:

"I think the speech speaks for itself. I would take some different viewpoints, but I think it was a good speech and I think Harriman made a good speech."

Apparently, Kefauver referred to a speech made by Harriman, along with other Democrats, at the big party dinner in Chicago Nov. 19.

He said the Republican Administration has "fumbled and vacillated" in foreign policy and that the whole area of foreign policy should be thoroughly debated in the campaign.

"I don't think we have taken the initiative to have a program to meet the Russian new smile," Kefauver said. "I also think we need a clear-cut policy in the Middle East. We should use our prestige to get some kind of peace settlement there."

Asked about reports that he would take the vice presidential nomination on a ticket headed by Stevenson, Kefauver said simply: "It is not in my calculations."

HOWARD L. YOUNG ELECTED Howard Lee Young has been elected vice president of American Zinc, Lead & Smelting Co. Howard L. Young, president, announced yesterday.

The new vice president, son of Howard L. Young, Jr., joined American Zinc Sales Co. in 1937 at Columbus, O., and became central district manager in 1941. He was transferred to St. Louis in 1951 as assistant manager of sales.

S. Korea Official to Retire. SEOUL, Dec. 1 (UP)—Ham Tai Yung, 82 years old, South Korea's little-known vice president, said today he will not seek re-election next year. He said, "I have not accomplished much and I would like to retire."

DETROIT NEWSPAPERS MISS EDITION BECAUSE OF STRIKE

DETROIT, Dec. 1 (UP)—Detroit's two afternoon papers missed their first editions today for the first time in history because of a strike of stereotype workers which has hit all three dailies here.

Allen Nelber, city editor of the Detroit News, said the paper would not publish "for the first time since the paper began in 1873."

Ernest Rapalle, assistant city editor of the Detroit Times, said that paper also would not be able to turn out its first edition.

The 120 members of the AFL Detroit Stereotype Workers struck the News and Times and the Detroit Free Press, a morning paper, this morning. Negotiations between the three papers and the union broke off about three hours before the strike deadline.

FIRST S-D DAY MISHAP HERE AS YOUTH ATTACKS DRIVER A bizarre accident, the first on Safe-Driving day in the city, was reported to police early today by Dr. David Miller, 1130 Collingwood drive, Olivette.

Dr. Miller told police he was driving north on Rosedale avenue and stopped for a traffic signal at Skinner boulevard. A car pulled alongside, containing three young men, who shouted at him, "You had better learn to drive."

Dr. Miller said one of the men got out, opened the door of his car, and hit him twice in the face with his fist.

Under the force of the blows, Dr. Miller said his foot slipped from the brake pedal. The car rolled ahead, jumped the curb, and damaged a fence at the ice house of the City Products Corp., 830 Rosedale. Dr. Miller refused medical attention.

FIRE IN ENRIGHT AVENUE HOME DOES $8000 DAMAGE A fire in a three-story residence at 4148 Enright avenue caused damage estimated by firemen at $8000 late yesterday.

The fire started in the basement and spread through the upper stories to the roof. It was discovered by John D. Thompson, a Negro, who lives there, 10 minutes after he had filled and lighted an oil stove. Police, who made an investigation, said oil apparently spilled from the stove and ignited a partition.

Thompson, 22 years old, is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Thompson, who live with him. Nobody was injured.

ASSERTS SPEECH ON G.M. COST HIM HIS DEALERSHIP

Michigan Man Testifies
Curtice Called Him
'Red' After Talk on Cut-Rate Sales.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 1 (AP)—A former Michigan automobile dealer said today his three General Motors dealerships were canceled because he made a public speech criticizing cut-rate sales of cars to factory employees and executives.

Lee C. Anderson, former Pontiac, Chevrolet and Buick dealer at Lake Orion, Mich., told the Senate anti-monopoly subcommittee that G.M. president Harlow Curtice canceled the franchises.

Anderson said he made the speech at the Rotary club at Oxford, Mich., last June 7. Twenty days later, he said, he got notices his dealerships would end Oct. 31.

Anderson was another in a series of former G.M. dealers who have complained of G.M. practices in their testimony before the subcommittee, which is making a study of G.M. operations.

Anderson said Curtice told him face to face: "You are a Red."

In answer to questions later, Anderson said "I don't know why Curtice called me a Red."

He also quoted Curtice as asking him with contempt: "What is Art Summerfield going to do for you now? You went to him for help."

Anderson said that Curtice was referring to Postmaster General Arthur Summerfield, formerly a Chevrolet dealer at Flint, Mich. Anderson added that "Summerfield came to me for help. I didn't go to him."

Near Pontiac Factory. Anderson said his retail dealership is just a few miles from the Pontiac factory and midway between Detroit and Flint. He said he had protested in recent years what he said was an increasing number of cut-rate sales to G.M. executives and employees and that Summerfield learned a similar policy was to operate in the Chevrolet plant near Summerfield's dealership.

Anderson said Curtice's comments came when he appeared on Aug. 19 of this year to top G.M. executives to restore his dealerships.

He said Curtice ended this session after Anderson promised that he would not make "more trouble for G.M."

But three days later, Anderson said, he received a letter saying the earlier order terminating his dealerships was upheld.

Senator Joseph O'Mahoney (Dem., Wyoming), head of the subcommittee, suggested yesterday that Congress may be called on to enact legislation to govern the relationships of auto manufacturers and their dealers.

USE OF ANTIBIOTIC ON FOOD PERMITTED FOR FIRST TIME WASHINGTON, Dec. 1 (AP)—The Food and Drug Administration has announced that for the first time it will permit the use of an antibiotic on a food.

The agency said that chlorotetracycline, which was first marketed as aureomycin, may now be used as a preservative for uncoked poultry.

The antibiotic is added to the water in which the poultry is chilled after dressing.

CRANBERRY TOAST

A BREAKFAST TREAT

Breakfast all too often is the dulllest meal of the day. So why not give it a lift with this breakfast tempter? Your morning fruit is served right atop your toast. Try it with crisp sausage links or bacon slices.

Cranberry-Fruited Toast.

Two cups fresh cranberries (sliced or coarsely chopped).
Three-fourths cup brown sugar.
One-third cup chopped nuts.
Two tablespoons grated orange rind.

Three or four bananas.
Eight slices bread.
Butter or margarine.

Combine and mix thoroughly cranberries, sugar, nuts and grated orange rind. (This mixture can be prepared in advance and stored in refrigerator over night).

Cut slices of bread into rounds or trim crusts to form squares. Toast lightly on both sides and spread with butter or margarine.

Slice and arrange bananas on toasted bread, top with cranberry mixture, brush with melted butter and place under slow broiler heat for six to 10 minutes. Yield: four servings.

Economy Dish

Thick chunks of lean pork shoulder are combined with canned tomatoes and fresh vegetables in the preparation of this juicy pork skillet. Serve the thrifty pork dish with hot cooked noodles and jellied Waldorf salad.

PORK SKILLET

A THRIFTY DISH TO SERVE NOW

Pork skillet, using diced pork shoulder meat and vegetables, is a thrifty and succulent dish to set before family or friends. As its name suggests, pork skillet may be cooked on top of the range or put into a moderate oven for thorough cooking. The savory combination is an excellent choice for chafing-dish service from the buffet board.

Spoon the pork and vegetable combination over freshly cooked noodles or spaghetti, if you like. Add a jellied Waldorf salad for flavor and texture contrast.

Pork Skillet.

Two pounds lean pork shoulder.
Two tablespoons melted fat.
One medium onion, sliced.
One No. 303 can tomatoes.
One-half cup diced green pepper.
One-half cup diced celery.
One tablespoon worcestershire sauce.
One and one-half teaspoons salt.

Cut pork into one-inch cubes and brown in melted fat in a heavy skillet. Pour off excess fat. Add onions, tomatoes, green pepper, celery, worcestershire sauce and salt. Cover and cook slowly one and one-half hours. Yield: Six servings.

Four tablespoons butter or margarine, melted and cooled.
Preheat oven to 400 degrees (hot). Lightly grease (one-dozen) muffin pan. Sift dry ingredients in mixing bowl. Combine beaten egg, thawed and undiluted orange juice concentrate and milk and beat well. Pour into dry ingredients and stir just until flour is moistened. Do not beat until smooth, batter should be lumpy.

Lightly stir in melted and cooled butter or margarine. Do not use more than 15 strokes to blend. Fill greased muffin pans two-thirds full and bake in hot oven (400 degrees) 25 minutes. Serve hot. Yield: One dozen muffins.

HERE IS A DIFFERENT SORT OF CAULIFLOWER PICKLE

Pickled cauliflower is most often found floating in a tangy mustard sauce, but it can be made into an entirely different relish if its crispness is preserved in a clear vinegar spiced with cloves.

Cauliflower Pickle.

Two large heads cauliflower (approximately four pounds trimmed).
Twelve onions.
Two tablespoons salt.
Three-fourths cup sugar.
One teaspoon ground turmeric.

Two teaspoons whole mustard seed.
One teaspoon whole celery seed.
One small dried whole red pepper.
One-half teaspoon whole cloves.
One and one-half cups white vinegar.

One and one-half cups water. Remove leaves from cauliflower. Wash and tear into flowerettes. Scald onions, peel and slice. Mix with cauliflower and salt. Let stand overnight. Drain. Rinse in cold water. Taste; if too salty, soak one hour in cold water. Drain.

Combine sugar, turmeric, mustard seed, celery seed and red pepper in an eight-quart preserving kettle. Tie whole cloves in a bag and add. Stir in vinegar and water. Boil five minutes. Add cauliflower. Boil only until crisp-tender, five to 10 minutes.

Pack hot into sterilized jars. Fill jars with boiling liquid. Adjust lids. Seal at once. Yield: approximately seven pints.

FLAKY CRUST EASY TO MAKE WITH GOLDEN COOKING OIL

Here is a recipe you may want to try during the holiday season, when pies play such an important part in our entertaining.

This crust is made with an all-purpose liquid shortening with butterlike flavor and color. The golden oil makes the pastry especially flaky and flavorful.

Kwik-Krust.

Two cups flour.
One teaspoon salt.
One-half cup cooking oil.
Five tablespoons ice water.

Mix flour and salt. Combine oil with ice water and beat with fork until thick. Pour over flour and salt mixture, mixing and tossing with fork until it forms a moist dough.

Press into ball and place between two large squares of wax paper. Roll pastry between wax paper until it is about one-eighth inch thick. Remove top layer of wax paper.

Lift dough by under layer of wax paper and turn into pie pan. Remove paper and press dough gently to fit pan. Fill and bake in pre-heated 425 degree oven until golden brown. Yield: Two nine-inch crusts.

FANCY TOPPING

Baked Jonathan apples become a festive dessert when served with a topping of nut-flavored cream. Fold rolled graham crackers into crumbs and crushed peanut brittle into whipped cream and spoon over the baked apples after they are chilled.

FORECASTS HOTEL REGISTRATION BY TV ON SIDEWALKS

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 1 (AP)—A hotel executive says sidewalk television receivers and transmitters will allow tired, dusty travelers of the future to register at a hotel without getting out of their automobiles. "It will no longer be necessary for prospective patrons to look for a parking space before going into a hotel to make inquiries," Tom L. Powell, president of the American Hotel Association, said yesterday.

Sidewalk TV will be installed by hotels throughout the nation, Powell predicted. He is proprietor of the Plaza, San Antonio, Tex. The A.H.A. opens its annual convention here today.

Russians Rate Smaller Salute Than Tito in Visit to Burma

NIKITA KHRUSHCHEV (left), Russia's Communist party chief, and PREMIER NIKOLAI BULGANIN stand well back while looking over a souvenir of their current trip to India. Seven-month-old tiger was presented to them as they visited a state farm near Bareilly.

President Ba U Not Even at Airport— Khrushchev, Bulganin Get Handshake From Premier U Nu.

RANGOON, Dec. 1 (UP)—Russia's roving rulers, arrived here today from India for a week's tour of Burma and ran into protocol arrangements a couple of notches lower than those accorded Marshal Tito of Yugoslavia on his recent visit. Soviet Premier Nikolai Bulganin and Communist party secretary Nikita Khrushchev landed at Rangoon's Migaladon airport to a cherry welcome from flag-waving Burmese and a handshake from Premier U Nu.

They rated only a 19-gun salute, whereas Tito received a 21-gun salute on his visit. The Russians also have to drive 11 miles from the airport to Rangoon to meet Burmese president, Dr. Ba U although the president was on hand personally to greet the Yugoslavia leader whose visit generated far more excitement.

Security arrangements for the Russians also were a lot less strict than those imposed when Chinese Communist Premier and Foreign Minister Chou En-lai visited here early this year. The Burmese explained there were anti-Communist Chinese here but few if any disgruntled white Russians or exiles from the Soviet bloc.

U Nu, who visited Moscow recently, turned out at the airport with his Cabinet while an honor guard stood at attention. Archways were erected on the Rangoon streets bearing welcome in Russian and Burmese. Boy Scouts lined the route to the city.

Although the Burmese did not feel the same kinship they felt with Tito, they were enthusiastic over Russia's oft-pronounced policy of peaceful co-existence and the Soviet leaders' attempts to make friends with such neutral Asian countries as India, Burma and Indonesia.

Some government opponents protested against the Russian visit on the ground it would have propaganda effect for Russia and none for Burma.

After their tour of Burma, the Russian leaders will return to India for another week-long trip through the eastern and northern parts of that country.

A huge crowd led by Indian Prime Minister Nehru turned out as the Soviet leaders left Calcutta.

KOREA BILLS U.N. FOR $50,000,000 FOR ELECTRICITY

SEOUL, Dec. 1 (AP)—South Korea yesterday asked the United Nations Command "to wipe an old debt off the books"—a multimillion dollar bill for electricity, water and transportation.

The full amount was not given, but the Korean government recently estimated the bill for power and utilities furnished U.N. forces since early in the Korean war at about $50,000,000.

"We dislike presenting bills to the gallant allies who fought shoulder to shoulder with us against the Communist aggressor," Hongkee Karl, Government spokesman, said in a statement.

Karl said there was an agreement early in the war to pay for these services to provide which "the Korean Government has been put to considerable expense." He added the money was needed to help ease a budget deficit and to check inflation.

The U.N. command called off a meeting on the question last month after a dispute over procedure.

GOLDFISH DEAL TURNS INTO THRIVING BUSINESS

GOODMAN, Miss. (UP)—Norman King changed his mind about being stung on the goldfish he ordered back in 1927.

Snakes and turtles ate the goldfish in King's pond, but the weeds sent along by the hatchery have thrived these many years, and he claims his Shady Rest Fisheries is the nation's biggest dealer in aquarium plants.

King harvests 11 different types of underwater plants. He has sold as high as $1000 worth of the plants in a single month.

AIR FORCE SAYS IT IS SPEEDING OUTPUT OF JETS

Denies Reports Symington Quoted That Acceleration Plans Would Be Dropped.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 1 (UP)—The Air Force said today that contrary to claims by Senator Stuart Symington (Dem.), Missouri, it is carrying out its production speed-up of two super-sonic jet fighters.

Symington said Monday night that he had heard reports the Administration would drop the production speed-up it had promised after Russia's display of power last May.

But Assistant Air Secretary Dudley C. Sharp said in a statement that "the acceleration of procurement programs previously announced is being carried out."

The two jet fighter planes concerned are the F-101B Voodoo interceptor and the F-104 day fighter. The Air Force told Congress last July 22 it would speed production of both types. Neither plane will enter combat units for about a year.

Adjustments Made.

Sharp conceded that there had been "adjustments" in some plane buying plans. But he said "there has been no change in the intent to supply the Air Force 137-wing program with the most modern equipment."

Other officials said that two adjustments affected the C-123 transport designed for moving Army troops and equipment and the B-47 strategic bomber.

"Some fewer" C-123s will be delivered this fiscal year than previously planned but will be turned out in the year starting next July 1.

Slowdown on Line.

It is estimated 13 to 15 of the strategists have been slowed down on the production line at Marietta, Ga. Air Force officials said Lockheed Aircraft, which operates the plant, wanted to slow production of those few planes so that it could more easily bring into production at the same plant the C-130 transport without seriously affecting the size of its labor force.

Inasmuch as about 1500 B-47s have already been built, Air Force officials said the delayed production of 13 to 15 would make no difference in the force's combat readiness.

Air Force officials also said there had been "some adjustment" in production of the F-101A Voodoo, a long-range fighter, to assure acceleration of the F-101B interceptor.

INDICTED RED PARTY LEADER SOUGHT 4 YEARS GIVES UP

NEW YORK, Dec. 1 (UP)—An indicted Communist leader sought for more than four years as a fugitive surrendered to the United States attorney yesterday.

Fred Fine, Communist party secretary of public affairs, was arraigned before United States District Judge Edward Weinfeld and held in $20,000 bail for trial on Dec. 5 with four other "second string" Communist leaders.

Fine surrendered with his attorney and did not disclose where he had been since his indictment with 20 others in 1951. Two others of the 21 indicted "second-string" Communists are still listed as fugitives.

Fine will stand trial with Mrs. Marion Bachrach, who obtained a severance from the earlier trial because of illness; Sidney Steinberg, also a former fugitive; Alexander Trachtenberg and George Blake Charney. The last two were granted new trials after their conviction as a result of the turnabout testimony of Harvey Matusow.

MEETING FAVORS FORMING GROVOIS SEWER SUBDISTRICT

A nearly unanimous sentiment in favor of the formation of a sanitary trunk sewer sub-district to serve the Gravois creek watershed and for the installation of a trunk sewer line there was expressed last night by 200 persons who attended a preliminary hearing held by the Metropolitan St. Louis Sewer District.

The hearing at the Sappington school, Gravois road, Sappington, was a preliminary one intended to gather information concerning the extent of the watershed rather than to draw precise boundaries for the sub-district. William Q. Kehr, executive director of the sewer district, said.

Kehr said the new subdistrict would include approximately 25 square miles, and would look toward the installation of a trunk sewer 10 miles in length reaching from Kirkwood south and east to the junction of Gravois creek with River Des Peres near the Mississippi river.

GRANDVIEW AIR BASE MADE PERMANENT INSTALLATION

GRANDVIEW, Mo., Dec. 1 (UP)—Grandview Air Force Base today was a permanent installation.

In dedication ceremonies attended last night by high-ranking military officers, Senator Stuart Symington (Dem.), Missouri, called the "an essential key to our defense."

"Never before did we have to worry about defense in the interior of America," said Symington, who was the first Secretary of the Air Force. "Today, in this air-atomic age the interior is more vulnerable than our coasts were formerly."

The base now is headquarters of the Central Air Defense Force, one of three such groups in the United States.

Gen. Earle E. Partridge, commander of the Continental Air Defense Command, described progress of the nation's air defense since World War II.

CIGARETTES MAY BREAK LUNG AIR SACS, SAY DOCTORS

BOSTON, Dec. 1 (UP)—Cigarette smoking, widely blamed for lung cancer, may be "even more hazardous than has been hitherto recognized," four doctors said here today.

The physicians said in a report to the ninth clinical meeting of the American Medical Association that cigarette smoking may be the cause of many cases of an ailment called pulmonary emphysema—rupture of tiny air sacs in the lung.

They said the illness was relatively common and "since it causes a great deal of disability and may even be fatal, smoking may be even more hazardous than has been hitherto recognized."

They based their report on a study of 40 patients with chronic "obstructive pulmonary emphysema," all of whom had been heavy smokers of cigarettes.

The report, by Drs. Francis C. Lowell, William Franklin, Alan L. Michelson and Irving W. Schiller, of Massachusetts Memorial hospitals, said 10 cases of emphysema and two of lung cancer also were found among the group.

KILLS 2 DOCTORS, WOUNDS ONE, BLOWS HIMSELF UP

BRISBANE, Australia, Dec. 1 (AP)—A man walked into the office of two Brisbane doctors today, shot them dead, and then blew himself up with a suitcase full of homemade bombs.

Another doctor and a bystander were injured severely.

Police said Karl Kast, who came to Australia from Germany 16 years ago, strode directly into the office of Drs. A. V. Meehan and A. R. Murray and fired at point blank range. His shots also seriously wounded Dr. M. J. Gallagher.

The assailant then walked into the office of Dr. J. R. S. Lahz and touched off the four gelignite bombs in the suitcase. George Boland, who heard the shooting, tried to prevent the explosion. Both his hands were blown off. Dr. Lahz suffered severe shock. Kast's motive was not learned immediately.

SHOE UNIONS VOTE TONIGHT ON OFFER

New Proposal Made by International Shoe Co. to End Strike.

A new company proposal to end a strike of 17,000 employees of International Shoe Co. will be voted on at a meeting of delegates of the AFL, Boot & Shoe Workers and CIO United Shoe Workers union tonight at the York Hotel.

The proposal was made yesterday at a negotiation session held under auspices of the Federal Mediation Service. Commissioner A. E. Johnson refused to discuss details of the offer.

Russell Taylor, president of the United Shoe Workers, expressing optimism, indicated the offer was somewhat better than one recently made by the company and turned down by both unions.

The workers, who are employed at 40 plants in Missouri, Illinois, Arkansas and Kentucky, have been on strike since Nov. 7 in support of demands for a two-year contract, a pension system, an 8 per cent wage increase the first year and a 4 per cent increase the second.

Both unions also represent about 9000 workers who are striking at Brown Shoe Co. plants. They are making similar demands. Wages under the old contracts averaged $1.20 an hour, a union spokesman said.

DEAN YOUNGDAHL CALLS U.S. ENTRY LAW 'IMMORAL'

Head of Washington U.
Social Work School
Testifies Before Senate Group.

By a Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 1—The United States immigration law today was described as immoral and unethical by Dean Benjamin Youngdahl of the George Warren Brown School of Social Work.

Appearing as one of the principal witnesses before Senate Judiciary subcommittee on immigration and naturalization, Dean Youngdahl was strongly critical of the so-called group quota system in the present law which is based on population statistics of 1920.

He argued that the "human worth of the individual" not his membership in any group should be the criterion for his admission to the United States. "The world knows we are discriminating against many people," Dean Youngdahl said. "If we actually tried to do something consistent with anti-American propaganda we could not do better than we are doing with the immigration law."

Italy's Quota. Noting that Italy, for example, has an admission quota of only 300 persons a year, Dean Youngdahl said that under present law it is doubtful that its predecessor at Washington University, Dr. Frank J. Bruno, a native of Italy, would have been able to get into the United States.

The hearings, over which Senator Thomas C. Hennings Jr., St. Louis Democrat, is presiding temporarily, are being held on proposed amendment to the McCarran-Walter Immigration Act of 1952 by several Senators.

One of the principal complaints against the act is that it binds immigration entries to a national origin system which leaves thousands of unused quota allowances to certain favored nations and cuts off nations whose citizens are seeking entry most.

Passed in 1952.

The act was passed in 1952 over the veto of President Truman. Its authors were Senator Pat McCarran of Nevada and Representative Francis Walter of Pennsylvania, both Democrats. McCarran is dead but Walter is putting up a persistent fight to maintain the law as it stands.

In the operation of the law, Dean Youngdahl said, the Government does not actually grant citizenship of first class status to immigrants but, rather, gives them a "license" to live here "under the specter of fear of deportation if they don't behave or if they plead the Fifth Amendment when accused of wrongdoing."

If naturalized citizens "don't behave," he said they should be punished as are other citizens, not deported. He said he would not discuss the merits of the Fifth Amendment but it is a part of the Constitution and constitutional privileges should be available without restriction to all citizens, naturalized or otherwise.

No Scientific Basis. "There is no scientific evidence nor ethnic basis for the determination that the citizens of one foreign nation or members of a racial group are either superior or inferior to others," he added.

Supplementing his own contemporaneous observations on the law, Youngdahl submitted to Hennings a statement on behalf of St. Louis Committee on Immigration Policy, of which the very Rev. Paul C. Reinert, S.J., president of St. Louis University, and the very Rev. William Scarlett, of St. Louis, retired Episcopal bishop, are honorary chairmen.

"The immigration act should be revised to effect a realistic program of liberal, but controlled immigration, based on the recognition of human dignity and individual merit, and to strengthen our position of leadership among free nations, great and small, in the present struggle against the Communist dictatorship as well as other forms of totalitarianism," the statement said.

The committee recommended throwing out the national origin quota system which, it said, "is based on discriminatory and racist concepts," and eliminating the drastic curtailment on the admission of colored persons and discriminatory treatment of persons of Asiatic extraction.

Amendment Proposed.

The law should be amended also to do away with the policy of allowing "immigration of totalitarian groups who reformed before entry into the United States, while requiring deportation of those who reform after entry, the committee said.

The committee also would abolish deportation for alleged acts "many years past," automatic revocation on citizenship for innocent members of the family of an offender and restore college and university professors to the class of quota-exempt immigrants, because of the growing shortage of teachers in this country.

Yesterday Paul G. Hoffman urged that this country open its doors to more immigrants with immigrants being judged on their individual merits rather than on a quota basis. The former foreign aid chief, now chairman of the Studebaker-Packard Corp., said the national origin system of fixing immigration quotas violates the basic concept of a free society that "each man should be treated as an individual and judged on his individual merits."

Under the system an overall annual quota of 154,657 immigrants is divided among other nations on the basis of the national origin of the United States population in 1920. By far the largest quotas are allotted to northern and western European nations.

ARMY'S RESERVE PROGRAM IS OFF TO SLOW START

Only 4500 Youths Sign
Up for 6-Month
Training in First 8
Weeks of New Plan.

By ELTON C. FAY
WASHINGTON, Dec. 1 (AP)—The Army has enlisted slightly more than 4500 six-month trainees in the first eight weeks of the new reserve program.

The figures were made public today by the Army in answer to an inquiry on progress of this phase of the latest of a long series of efforts to create a full-fledged reserve system.

These pre-draft-age youths have volunteered for six months of active training, followed by seven and one-half years of reserve liability. Not all of them actually are entering training camps immediately. Many have been granted deferred status to allow them to complete high school and other studies.

The goal of the Defense Department is to have 95,000 trainees by next June 30, a beginning toward an eventual pool of 250,000 trained men who could be called to duty in another war.

Slower Than Expected. Before the program began last Oct. 3, officials talked of getting 5000 trainees to enlist each month. Officials of the National Security Training Commission, the group which is monitoring the program passed by the last Congress, concede now, however, that the six-month training phase of the program is off to a "slower start than we had expected."

But both commission members and Army officials insist that it is too soon to judge the success of the program. Up to a year of operation of the volunteer system will be required to make that possible, they say.

Chairman David Sarnoff of the commission thinks one thing that has retarded the program so far is failure of parents and the eligible youths to understand the choices and advantages in completing military training early.

But he also comments that if the program "doesn't get off the ground" it is a trial, it will be a matter requiring changes by Congress. Congress has declined to operate the reserve training system through use of selective service methods.

Brucker's Position. Secretary of the Army Wilber Brucker is grim in his determination to make the program work. He says there will be "no ifs" about it.

"The Army is going to proceed upon the principle that this can be done," Brucker said. "There is going to be no sulking about it. We're not going to go around saying that we wish Congress had done a little better by us. We are going to accept this (program) and make it good."

However, Brucker also has agreed that "it may be necessary in the course of time for some amendments to be considered but not at the present time nor under these circumstances."

For the entire reserve program—the training and pay of reservists, veterans and those non-veterans who have voluntarily joined reserve units since the war, as well as the new six-month part of the program—the Defense Department had available at the beginning of the current fiscal year about one billion dollars. Of this, $520,000,000 is allocated to the Army, $244,000,000 to the Navy (including the Marine Corps) and $236,000,000 to the Air Force.

Officials were unable to say what proportion of the available money is being set aside for the six-month trainee program. This presumably is because of the inability now to predict the rate of acceleration of the volunteer trainee program.

NEGRO PUPILS WIN FIRST SUIT ON SEGREGATION IN KENTUCKY

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Dec. 1 (AP)—The first suit seeking an end to segregation in Kentucky's public schools ended today in favor of Negro pupils in Adair county.

United States District Judge Mac Swinford ruled the county must, "at the earliest practicable date," comply with the Supreme Court decision outlawing segregation.

His opinion was not an order. An order listing the time by which the Adair county board of education must start desegregation will be prepared shortly.

The court ruled, however, that Negro high school pupils should be admitted to white schools by Feb. 1, 1956.

ACCUSED HEIR WILL LOSE $100,000 IF CONVICTED

WASHINGTON, Dec. 1 (UP)—Ronald Merchant, 23 years old, father of a month-old baby, stands to lose $100,000 if he is convicted on housebreaking and larceny charges that have been filed against him.

His mother left him the money when she died two years ago. But her will specified that he was to get nothing if he ever was convicted of a crime. Merchant was declared not guilty on a stolen car charge yesterday, on grounds of insanity. He was committed to a mental hospital where psychiatrists said he probably could be cured.

When cured, he will face trial on charges of housebreaking and larceny. Under his mother's will, Merchant is supposed to start receiving his $100,000 in two years, when he is 25. He would receive the full amount when he is 40—if not convicted of a crime.

FINED $100, LOSES LICENSE FOR DRIVING WHEN DRUNK

Fred Ahorn, a carpenter of the 6000 block of Sutherland avenue, was fined $100 and his driver's license was suspended for 90 days when he was found guilty of driving when intoxicated by Police Court Judge Robert G. Dowd yesterday. He was also fined $25 on a charge of careless driving.

Police testified he was arrested Oct. 26 after his automobile rammed the rear of another machine in the 6800 block of Chippewa street. He denied having been intoxicated when the accident occurred.

FREE SALK SVOTS FOR CHILDREN HERE

State-Federal Program to Begin at Health Centers Monday.

About 19,000 St. Louis children who are registered at the city's five health centers will receive their first Salk polio vaccine shots, free of charge, at the health centers beginning Monday, Dr. J. Earl Smith, Health Commissioner, announced today.

The program, extending over a period of seven to 10 days, is the first implementation here of a state-federal program of providing free inoculations for children whose families cannot afford to pay.

Parents and guardians of children to be inoculated already have been notified, Dr. Smith said, and no other children may receive the vaccine in the initial program. The children are 1 to 10 years old.

Dr. Smith explained that although the group notified by mail included 21,000 children registered at health centers and about 1500 from orphanages and baby clinics, it was doubtful more than 19,000 would be brought in for inoculations.

Parents and guardians of children have been asked to bring them to the health centers on specific days between 9 and 11:30 a.m. Parents must sign the necessary authorization and present the card mailed to them by the Health Division, it was emphasized.

The inoculation centers, staffed principally by medical personnel from the Board of Education, will be set up beginning Monday at the following locations:

Cass Avenue Center, at Pruitt Housing project, 2347 O'Fallon street; Wahl Health Center, 3200 South Thirteenth street; Laclede-Leffingwell Center, at Vashon Community Center, Market street and Compton avenue; Wahl Health Center, 1528 North Kingshighway, and the center at 1501 South Grand boulevard.

The Cass Avenue and Laclede-Leffingwell centers are not large enough to handle the inoculation project, Dr. Smith said, and for that reason the work will be done at the temporary locations. The centers are open Monday through Friday.

St. Louis county's plans for administering the free Salk vaccine will be discussed tomorrow at a meeting of Dr. Herbert R. Domke, county health commissioner, and members of the county medical society's committee on public health.

WESTINGHOUSE MANAGEMENT SALARIES CUT 40-50 PCT.

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Dec. 1 (UP)—Westinghouse Electric Corp. cut salaries of its top management officials 40 to 50 per cent effective today and ordered sweeping lay-offs to offset the effects of a sevenweek strike.

All elected officers of the firm took salary cuts of 50 per cent. At all plants closed by the walkout and at all general overhead operations, salaries of "certain higher management personnel" were reduced 40 per cent.

Gwilym A. Price, chairman-president of the corporation, said in a letter to all members of management that the move was designed to "reduce to the greatest possible extent the losses incurred during the strike" by the CIO International Union of Electrical Workers.

Price said also many professional and administrative employees would be laid off weekly on a rotation basis, except those needed for "essential functions." All non-management, non-professional salary and hourly employees will be furloughed except those "carrying on necessary and important work," Price said.

The 44,000 members of the CIO union walked out in a contract dispute seven weeks ago, closing 30 installations.

GAMBLER GETS DISMISSAL IN INCOME TAX EVASION CASE

MILWAUKEE, Dec. 1 (AP)—Sidney A. Brodson, who told a Senate crime investigating committee in 1951 that he bet up to a million dollars a year on college football and basketball games, yesterday got a dismissal of a federal income tax evasion indictment.

Judge Kenneth P. Grubb dismissed the indictment which had accused Brodson of defrauding the Government of $79,621 in taxes.

Counsel for Brodson had moved for dismissal on the ground that Brodson's constitutional rights were violated when the Government seized his assets by filing tax liens against him and then indicting him on criminal charges that would be expensive to defend.

Still outstanding against Brodson is a tax lien of $342,120 filed against him by the Internal Revenue Service Oct. 29, 1951, shortly after Brodson testified in Washington. The lien is a civil case and is not a part of the criminal indictment which was dismissed.

TESTIMONY HEARD ON SWISS CLAIM TO GENERAL ANILINE

WASHINGTON, Dec. 1 (AP)—The return of the $105,000,000 General Aniline & Film Corp. to a Swiss firm is "vitally important" in Switzerland, a Senate Judiciary subcommittee was told yesterday.

But the return was branded "unthinkable" by Harry L. Derby, a United States stockholder in the corporation. He said it would result in the loss of national defense secrets.

General Aniline was seized by the United States in wartime 1942 on the ground that it was a German firm operating under the cloak of Swiss ownership. It since has been run by the Government. Walter Germann, managing director of Interhandel, the Swiss firm which claims 90 per cent ownership of General Aniline, said the "entire informed Swiss public" is watching the United States attitude on the case. He said the Swiss regard it as a test for the maintenance of "individual property rights, international law, and simple morality."

19 OF 149 AREAS NOW HAVE
6 PCT. OR MORE JOBLESS

WASHINGTON, Dec. 1 (UP)—The Labor Department reported today that 19 of 149 United States industrial centers still suffer substantial unemployment. It forecast that employment would continue rising slightly the rest of the year.

The department yesterday removed seven centers from the substantial unemployment listing. The number of such areas thus reached its lowest point since 1953. This compares with 53 in July, 1954, the low point of the 1953-54 recession. Such areas are listed as having 6 per cent of their labor force out of work.

The report said many other industrial centers are having trouble recruiting enough labor, particularly in those areas with aircraft, machinery and metal industries.

Those cities removed from the substantial unemployment classification were Pittsburgh and Philadelphia, Pa.; Knoxville and Chattanooga, Tenn.; Fall River and New Bedford, Mass., and Utica-Rome, N. Y.

SECURITY RISK FIRINGS PUT AT 342 OUT OF 3586

Others Reported Ousted Under Regular Civil Service or Departmental Procedures.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 1 (AP)—A Senate Civil Service subcommittee said today that 3241 of 3586 federal employees listed as fired under the Eisenhower Administration's security program were discharged under "regular civil service or normal departmental procedures."

"Only 342 were terminated pursuant to executive order 10450," Paul E. Hadlick, counsel of the subcommittee, said in referring to the order issued by President Eisenhower in May 1953, setting up the present security program.

Hadlick said his statement was based on a staff check of "each and every agency" of the Government included in a report of the Civil Service Commission on security firings for the period between May 28, 1953, through June 30, 1955.

The CSC report, its fourth on the program, listed 3586 as the number of employees "terminated because of security questions falling within the purview" of the President's order.

Hadlick said a breakdown of the figures by individual agencies showed that only 342 were fired pursuant to the President's order and that one employee was discharged under a previous executive order of former President Truman.

He said that one agency, listed by the CSC as having terminated two employees, had not yet replied to the subcommittee's request for a breakdown.

Hadlick's statement was made as the subcommittee called officials of 24 Government departments and agencies to testify in two days of public hearings.

The hearings mark a resumption of an investigation the subcommittee has been carrying on since last spring under the chairmanship of Senator Olin D. Johnston (Dem.), South Carolina.

Democrats frequently have charged that Vice President Nixon and other Republicans made a "numbers game" out of reported security risk firings in the last election campaign.

After the civil service subcommittee's last series of hearings in September, Johnston said that testimony showed the figures given on the number of employees fired as security risks embraced many employees who would have been fired without any security program.

At the time Chairman Philip Young of the Civil Service Commission had reported 3614 employees fired under the program, which was put into effect by executive order of President Eisenhower in May, 1953.

Young told another Senate committee earlier this week that the figure now is 3685. But he said he makes no claim that all those fired were "security risks"—a term he said he avoids using.

Hadlick said the Civil Service Commission's position is that it has only the figures certified to it by the individual departments and agencies. So, he said, the subcommittee is calling in witnesses for a breakdown of the department figures.

At its hearing last September, the subcommittee was told that "in most cases" the 51 Government printing office employees listed as discharged for security reasons would have been fired earlier for "suitability reasons." These embrace various undesirable personal habits, as distinguished from questions of loyalty.

Similarly, H. V. Higley, head of the Veterans Administration, testified then that the "great majority" of the 449 VA employees included in Young's figures were not discharged under the security program but under regular Civil Service procedures.

Young is listed as the final witness for the subcommittee's present series of hearings.

DIEM OPPONENT BECOMES FIRST NATIVE SAIGON BISHOP

SAIGON, Dec. 1 (AP)—The Rev. Nguyen Van Hein, whom President Ngo Dinh Diem regards as pro-French and unwelcome here, has become the first native Catholic bishop of Saigon.

The Vietnamese educator was consecrated yesterday. Until today, only a Frenchman had worn the ecclesiastical mitre in what has now become the capital of the Vietnamese republic.

The president, a devout Roman Catholic, protested unsuccessfully to the Vatican against the appointment. His opposition is believed to be based on Father Hein's refusal some months ago to permit students of his seminary to take part in anti-colonialist, anti-Communist parade.

ST. LOUIS POST-DISPATCH Thurs., Dec. 1, 1955 15D

COUNTY COUNCIL REVERSES SELF ON POLICE FUNDS

It Votes Unanimously to Transfer $14,950 to Department for Use This Month.

The St. Louis County Council reversed itself yesterday and voted unanimously to authorize transfer of $14,950 from other funds to the police department to finance operations until Dec. 31.

Action came after members were told by County Supervisor Luman F. Matthews and Police Board Chairman Walter L. Metcalfe that the department was in "dire need."

Metcalfe said the department, with many of its patrol cars out of service because of their condition and no money for repairs, was "in the greatest state of emergency we have ever faced."

After the council action, Police Superintendent Albert E. DuBois said $8000 of the money would go for replacement of seven worn-out machines. Of the rest of the money, $4500 will be used for maintenance and repair of other cars.

Also approved by the council yesterday was transfer of $7105 from other funds for use by the Recorder of Deeds and $2000 for courthouse maintenance.

The council has turned down the transfer recommendation last week on motion of Councilman Harold D. Carey, Sixth District Republican. Carey was absent yesterday.

Election Board Chairman John J. Cole appeared before the council to request an increase in the election board budget of at least $35,000 to cover cost of a special state bond election in January. Date for this election had not been set when the election board presented its budget, Cole pointed out.

If an election canvass prior to the special election proves necessary, an additional $20,000 will be needed, Cole said. The county ultimately will be reimbursed by the state for the election cost, but this may take up to a year, Cole pointed out.

Councilman James H. J. McNary, Second District Democrat, read into the record a statement criticizing Matthews for naming members of the supervisory or "watchdog" committee for the $39,712,000 bond issue without consulting the council. McNary remarked that he thought appointment to the committee of Charles W. DeWitt, who headed a committee for expressways, was "unwise, to put it mildly."

In another action the council passed, over the opposing recommendation of the County Planning Commission, an ordinance rezoning from residential to business the classification of a 3.9-acre tract at Lindbergh boulevard and Link road, in northern St. Louis county.

Neighboring property owners protested against the proposal on the ground it was "spot zoning" and would lower property values.

Application for the rezoning was by Morris and A. Fisher, 4169 Manchester avenue, who plan operation of a sales and service establishment for trucks and farm and road equipment on the site.

Renewed protests were heard by the council on plans it is considering for use of a tract on U.S. Highway 67, north of Missouri Highway 140, as a sanitary landfill for trash and garbage. Ten property owners appeared yesterday in support of a petition previously filed bearing 230 names. Purchase of the site would be with bond funds voted in February 1954.

CYPRUS TERRORISTS THROW BOMB INTO AIRLINE OFFICE

NICOSIA, Cyprus, Dec. 1 (UP)—Terrorists threw a bomb into the Nicosia offices of the British-owned Cyprus Airways today and injured an Armenian employee.

Police said the bomb apparently was thrown from a yard adjoining the offices.

The latest attack came as Cypriot leaders stepped up their campaign against British rule with new demands for union with Greece. There were reports Greece would demand United Nations Security Council action on Cyprus.

Truman Hailed in London When Memoirs Are Published

Former President Called 'One of Least Ordinary Little Men Who Ever Lived.'

LONDON, Dec. 1 (UP)—Former President Harry Truman's memoirs were greeted by critics with unanimous praise on their publication here today.

"One critic said Truman was 'one of the least ordinary little men who ever lived.'"

Without exception, the reviews in London morning and evening newspapers praised both the book, "The Year of Decisions," and Truman himself.

The Times said that "more than anything else, it is a self-portrait. No one can read it without understanding better than before how it was that the modest, unassuming man who had been kept in the Washington background could, on Roosevelt's death, step forward without warning to carry the burden of being President of the world's most powerful country in the years when the load was heaviest."

"Every chapter in this book is alive because it reveals the two qualities in Mr. Truman which struck Sir Winston Churchill when they first met at Potsdam—his gay, precise sparkling manner and obvious power of decision."

Compared With Attlee.

The Daily Mail (Conservative) compared Truman with Clement Attlee, British Prime Minister, for part of Truman's early years of President, and said it "would be interesting to compare their respective performances" if Attlee also had written his memoirs. William Hardcastle in the Mail said he felt confident "that Mr. Truman would come off best."

The Mail said that when the full stories of other statesmen of the postwar period are written, "The Truman story will rank among the most valuable contributions to the history of the period."

Michael Foot, former left-wing member of Parliament, wrote in the Labor party newspaper Daily Herald that "it is impossible not to admire the way in which the man who had greatness thrust upon him survived the test."

Qualities of American Spirit. "No one surely can read his record of real achievement in those epoch-making days without acknowledging that he bravely expressed some of the finest qualities of the American spirit," Foot wrote.

"Harry Truman never received the well-earned united popular acclaim accorded to Dwight Eisenhower. But who can doubt that President most truly deserves the title of greatness."

Lord Beaverbrook's Evening Standard said that "to understate Mr. Truman's contribution to the history of our times would be to make as great a mistake as was made by those who sneered at his political ability."

"Is this really the American dream of the ordinary little man come true?" it said. "Or is Mr. Truman's success to be explained by the fact that he was one of the least ordinary little men who have ever lived?"

LOW BIDS FOR $208,238
ON COUNTY ROAD JOBS OK'D

Low bids totaling $208,238 on 4.8 miles of asphalt concrete resurfacing of major highways in St. Louis county were approved by the State Highway Commission at Jefferson City today. The $24,330 low bid of R. Dron Electrical Co., Granite City, on traffic signals at LeMay Ferry road and Lindbergh boulevard, Mehlville, also was approved.

Road bids approved were submitted by Granite Bituminous Paving Co., St. Louis, $178,769 on 4.1 miles on Lemay Ferry from Mehlville south to the Meramec river, and Bangert Bros., Normandy, $29,469 on 0.7 of a mile on Pennsylvania avenue from St. Charles Rock road to the Terminal Railroad tracks. Bid jobs call for 40 feet of resurfacing.

The local bids were among a large number approved by the commission for improvements on 90.9 miles of roads.

MOTORIST IS ACQUITTED IN MANSLAUGHTER CASE

Carl Heinemann, a painter, 1069A Tower Grove avenue, was acquitted by a jury today of manslaughter growing out of the death of Henry Holloway, a Negro, of injuries suffered when he was struck by Heinemann's automobile Aug. 22, 1954.

Witnesses testified Heinemann was traveling 60 to 80 miles an hour when his west-bound vehicle struck Holloway, who was trying to cross Chouteau avenue near Ewing avenue. The pedestrian was knocked 56 yards, it was testified. Heinemann, 25 years old, testified he was moving at only 30 miles an hour and did not see Holloway in time to avoid striking him.

The jury, in Circuit Judge Franklin E. Reagan's court, deliberated 45 minutes.

U.S. AGREES TO SURVEY ON PAKISTAN INVESTMENTS

POLICE SAID TO KEEP CITY FREE OF GANGS

Chamber of Commerce Magazine Praises Law Enforcement.

Police have created an "atmosphere of civic security that compels adult and juvenile organized gangs to give St. Louis a wide berth," the Chamber of Commerce monthly magazine, St. Louis Commerce, said in its November issue, distributed today.

Savings to the community from police work in safeguarding lives and protecting property would, if tabulated, "far exceed the department's annual budget, year in, year out," the magazine said.

The magazine quoted Chief Jeremiah O'Connell as saying officers make it a practice every night to test 61,319 doors to business establishments in the city, to be sure they are secure. Some doors are checked as often as once each hour during the night, O'Connell said. Other doors are tested two or three times a night.

An article on traffic said St. Louis was moving motor vehicles and pedestrians as well as any other large city in the country and pointed to figures showing that the traffic fatality rate here in the first nine months of 1955 was lower than in other big cities.

Citing community savings resulting from work of detectives, the magazine said the automobile theft squad recovered 80 per cent of the 4022 cars stolen here last year.

The squad saved insurance firms more than $250,000 last March when it recovered 273 cars stolen here for sale elsewhere by an auto theft gang, the magazine said.

CALLS ISRAEL DEMOCRACY BEACHHEAD AT FUND DINNER

In an address before more than 200 persons at a dinner last night at Hotel Chase inaugurating Israel bond sales, Joseph J. Schwartz said that Israel is the one beachhead of democracy in a part of the world where democracy is virtually unknown.

Schwartz, executive vice president of State of Israel Bonds, said that the purchase of Israel bonds constituted a political act in that it served notice to Arabs and Jews that American Jewry supported Israel.

Commenting on the refusal to cede Negev to the Arabs as a means of instituting peace, Schwartz said this territory was no longer a wasteland, but was a new source of oil, cotton, and many important minerals.

GARDNER AGAIN SAYS HE BACKS CHARTER PLAN

Alderman William K. Gardner (Dem.), Twenty-fifth Ward, who previously has supported efforts of Mayor Raymond R. Tucker to obtain passage by the aldermen of a bill for election of a board of freeholders to draft a new city charter, repeated today his endorsement of the proposal.

"It is obvious St. Louis needs a new charter," he said. "I definitely am not in favor of aldermanic action to amend the old charter."

However, as to the question of elimination of about 900 political patronage jobs in the "county" offices in St. Louis through consolidation of these offices with the city government, Gardner said he "is undecided." This is one of the principal aims of most proponents of a new charter.

EXPECTED G.I. TURNCOAT FAILS TO REACH HONG KONG

HONG KONG, Dec. 1 (AP)—A fourth G.I. turncoat who decided to come home after living in Red China failed to arrive here today as expected.

United States consular officials waiting at the border between China and this British colony said Richard R. Tenneson, of Alden, Minn., was not on the daily train from Canton. They said there was no indication when Tenneson might arrive. The Chinese Red Cross had informed the British Red Cross that Peiping was releasing him at his own request.

Tenneson was captured in Korea in May 1951. He was one of 21 G.I.s who refused to be repatriated after the armistice and instead chose to live in Red China. Three came home last summer.

MUSCULAR DYSTROPHY DRIVE WILL BE EXTENDED 10 DAYS

The 1955 Muscular Dystrophy Campaign will be extended another 10 days, campaign chairman Elmer M. Kerckhoff announced today.

Kerckhoff said the extension of time was being made to allow workers who have been hampered by the extremely cold weather to finish their solicitation.

In past years, letter carriers and fire fighters carried the entire burden of the fund-raising campaign. This year, however, they were joined by Legionnaires and other volunteers, Kerckhoff said.

UNION INSURANCE BROKERAGE FEES HELD EXCESSIVE

Senator Says Companies Apparently Make 'Pay-Offs' to Get Welfare Business.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 1 (UP)—Senate investigators have criticized as excessive fees paid to some brokers handling insurance policies for union welfare funds.

A Senate Labor subcommittee called additional insurance company executives for testimony today in resuming its welfare fund study.

One subcommittee member, Senator Gordon Allott (Rep., Colorado), commented yesterday that insurance brokers appear to be getting "payoffs" from companies anxious to land welfare fund business. He said some companies make special payments to brokers with funds that should be returned to union members covered by the policies.

Allott's comment came after Ralph Knoblock, vice president of the Washington National Insurance Co. of Evanston, Ill., testified that "the majority" of such welfare fund accounts are controlled by a broker who can shift the business among insurance companies at his discretion.

10 Per Cent Bonus. That is true, Knoblock said, whether the welfare funds are managed by employers or by unions. In some cases, he said, the payment of "something extra" is warranted to get the business. He said his company has an arrangement with two brokers which offers them a bonus of 10 per cent of premiums paid in addition to regular commissions on policies that are profitable.

The bonus, he said, comes out of money that would otherwise be returned to policy holders as insurance dividends.

Subcommittee investigator Blake Turner testified that Harry Epstein, Newark, N. J., and the insurance brokerage firm of Dash and Love in Philadelphia are the two brokers who get special consideration from Knoblock's insurance firm.

Administrators Named. Turner said Epstein also appointed local administrators who received an additional 3 per cent of premium totals.

Committee chairman Paul Douglas (Dem., Illinois), commented that most of the administrators appeared to be paid officials of the unions involved. He said their services should be paid for by the union, or, if a bonus is paid by the insurance company, that fact should be known to the union membership.

J. Warren Dash of the Philadelphia firm said the company earns its additional compensation by finding business and by servicing the policies. He stressed especially the broker's work in reducing malingering which runs up the cost of health and hospitalization policies.

The Modern Touch. NAGOYA, Japan, (AP)—City officials are going to reconstruct a famous, 350-year-old castle destroyed by an air raid in World War II. It will be an exact reproduction except for two things—two elevators to hoist tourists to the top of its five-story tower.

Campaign By-Product

ADLAI STEVENSON displaying sailfish he caught off Miami Beach, Fla., yesterday in an interlude in his campaign for the Democratic presidential nomination. At left is CHARLES NORTH, captain of fishing vessel on which the catch was made.

STEVENSON LANDS BIG FISH BUT HAS NO ROOM FOR IT

MIAMI BEACH, Dec. 1 (UP)—Adlai Stevenson boasted today of landing a six-foot two-and-one-half-inch sailfish but said he was puzzled about what to do with it.

"All the walls in my house are already covered," he said when asked if he planned to have it mounted.

Stevenson took time off from his campaign for the Democratic presidential nomination yesterday afternoon to go fishing on the yacht Mark-O-III owned by Clarence Fine of New York. An aid said they were about ready to give up on catching anything in the rough waters of the Atlantic's Gulfstream a mile offshore when Stevenson hooked the sail.

He bested the fish after a 28-minute battle and then posed for cameramen on the dock behind the winter home of Col. Jake Arvey, Illinois national committeeman, his host in Miami. Stevenson made the trip after addressing the American Municipal Association.

Today Stevenson did the type of campaigning he says he enjoys—meeting, shaking hands and answering questions of college students on the University of Miami campus.

INDONESIA ELECTIONS END; VOTING BEGAN SEPT. 29

JAKARTA, Nov. 30 (AP)—Indonesia's elections which started Sept. 29 ended today with an estimated 35,000,000 votes cast by 80 per cent of the 43,000,000 registered voters. Final results will not be known before next March or April.

Last to go to the polls were voters in scattered regions in Sumatra, Borneo, Celebes, the Moluccas and the lesser Sunda islands.

Latest unofficial tabulations account for nearly 31,000,000 votes. Standings of the four major parties: Nationalists, 8,078,625; Moslem Masjumi, 7,853,500; Moslem Orthodox Radicals, 6,451,136; Communists, 6,005,208. The rest are scattered among 186 other parties.

7 WEATHER MEN NAMED TO ASSIST ON FALLOUTS

WASHINGTON, Dec. 1 (AP)—Seven weather experts have been named to assist federal civil defense officials in determining the course of radiological fallout resulting from H-bomb explosions.

"The seven, the Weather Bureau said yesterday, would be assigned late this month to civil defense regional offices in Newton Center, Mass.; Olney, Md.; Thomasville, Ga.; Battle Creek, Mich.; Denton, Tex.; Denver and Santa Rosa, Calif.

The meteorologists also will advise on weather conditions in connection with natural disasters such as floods and hurricanes.

WORST SMOG OF SEASON BEGINS LIFTING IN BRITAIN

LONDON, Dec. 1 (UP)—Britain's worst smog of the winter began lifting early today and Government smoke fighters said they had found no "alarming concentration" of harmful chemicals which killed 4000 persons in 1951.

The only casualties were 11,000 baby chicks which had to be gassed at London airport because the plane which was to have flown them to Milan was delayed by the fog. They would have died if they had stayed overnight at the airport.

A robber snatched a mail-bag containing $2200 ($6440) from a post office guard and escaped in the fog.

BAGGING DEER PROVES EXPENSIVE FOR THIS MAN

MIDDLEVILLE, Mich. (UP)—V. V. Taylor, who doesn't go deer hunting because he "can't bear to shoot them," has bagged four deer during recent years with his automobile.

The Middleville druggist killed two deer on separate occasions and then two at once recently when they leaped in front of his car near Pennville. Tabor said he doesn't like "either version" of the sport and that "my version" is costly in car repairs.

CONTINENTAL CAN CO. FUND GIFT OF $10,002

Partial Report From Scullin Steel Co. Shows Increase.

A gift of $10,002 to the United Fund campaign by Continental Can Co. and its employees was announced today by W. B. McMillan, large firms' division chairman of the drive.

The gift is 106 per cent more than the firm and its employees gave last year to the Community Chest, Red Cross and other organizations now merged for fund-raising purposes in the United Fund.

A partial report from Scullin Steel Co. already shows an 8 per cent increase over last year's total giving to agencies now in the fund. So far this year $19,752 has been raised from the corporation and employees.

High percentage increases in contributions from some construction firms were reported by Powell B. McHaney, chairman of the trades division of the campaign.

The Israel Brothers Construction Co. has made a gift of $946, an increase of 377 per cent above last year's giving by the firm and its employees to the Fund agencies.

A gift of $3478 from the Woermann Construction Co. and its employees is an increase of 94.6 per cent above the gifts to agencies last year.

Dickie Construction Co. and its employees have given $1735, an increase of 80.9 over previous giving, and the Gamble Construction Co. and its employees, $1996, a 57.9 per cent increase.

Catches Fellow Pursuer.

TORONTO, Dec. 1 (UP)—Bank manager D. A. Burns gave chase yesterday when one of his tellers screamed that she had just been robbed of $2000. He grabbed a running man only to discover that his captive was a bank customer who also had been chasing the robber. The robber got away.

MARGARET MEAD HAS GOOD WORD FOR ADOLESCENTS

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich. (UP)—Dr. Margaret Mead, famed anthropologist and author, doesn't think adolescents are as bad as everybody thinks they are. "I think they are astonishingly good," Dr. Mead told an audience here. "We've abandoned them... let them go off in a lot of automobiles... refused to chaperone them... and we say, 'I don't want to be a kill-joy.'"

Nevertheless, the young people of today are making the best marriages this country has seen in 100 years," she said.

FRANCO BELIEVES MONARCHY WILL RETURN TO SPAIN

MADRID, Dec. 1 (UP)—Generalissimo Francisco Franco believes that restoration of the monarchy in Spain will come as "a historical and traditional necessity."

He said in a press conference at his El Pardo palace residence yesterday that the Spanish monarchy did not signify "power for the rich, for aristocrats or for certain groups and cliques." He did not say when he expected a new king to rule Spain but he warned that any future monarchy must be "pre-eminently social and popular" or it could not exist.

He said that in talks with United States Secretary of State Dulles, who came here during the Big Four foreign ministers conference at Geneva, there was "complete coincidence of thought."

GEN. M. C. WALTER GETS MERIT AWARD FROM RHEE

SEOUL, Dec. 1 (AP)—The Korea Civil Assistance Command passed out of existence yesterday and its retiring commander received from President Syngman Rhee South Korea's military award, the Order of Taeguk.

Rhee pinned the order on Brig. Gen. Mercer C. Walter for his "sympathetic understanding and willing co-operation." Walters leaves tomorrow for a new assignment with the Fifth Army at Chicago.

The relief work of the command is being taken over by the office of C. Tyler Wood, economic co-ordinator for the U.N. Command.

TALK ON GUARANTEED WAGE

The Rev. Joseph M. Becker S.J., research associate of the Institute of Social Order at St. Louis University, will address the regional meeting of the Catholic Economic Association at 4 p.m. tomorrow at the university's school of commerce and finance. He will speak on "The Guaranteed Annual Wage: Past, Present and Future."

DUKE FURNISHES SCOTS A LESSON IN THRIFTY CHARITY

LONDON, Dec. 1 (AP)—The Duke of Edinburgh went to a dinner for Scotsmen last night and showed he could match them all in canniness with cash.

As the Duke rose to speak he flourished a piece of paper from his menu. It was a subscription form for the Royal Scottish Corp., a charitable organization which gave the dinner.

"You will be pleased to hear my charitable action will be to keep my speech short," said the Duke.

"Those that cannot make speeches will have to think of something else to do."

Greenback Party Nominée.
INDIANAPOLIS, Dec. 1 (AP)—The Greenback party, which started campaigning for "money reform" in 1874, named Fred C. Proehl, an Edmonds (Wash.) grocer, as its 1956 nominee for president today. A mail referendum of members also nominated Edward Kirby Meador, Boston book publisher, for vice president.

LA PRENSA HEAD IS FLYING BACK TO ARGENTINA

Gainza Paz to Take Control of Paper After Nearly 5 Years of Exile.

BUENOS AIRES, Dec. 1 (AP)—Editor Alberto Gainza Paz flew homeward today to take charge once again of his family's newspaper La Prensa after nearly five years of exile. The newspaper which was seized by Juan D. Peron has been returned to its owners by the men who overthrew the dictator.

A tumultuous welcome was prepared for Gainza Paz, who was due early tonight from New York.

Leaflets urged the populace to turn out for a huge greeting. An automobile caravan was arranged to escort Gainza Paz from Ezeiza International Airport.

Provisional President Pedro Aramburu's caretaker government, pledged to right Peron's wrongs and restore democracy, issued simultaneous decrees yesterday returning La Prensa to the Paz family and abolishing the Peronista party.

This done, Government officials launched intensive talks with Henry F. Holland, United States Assistant Secretary of State for Inter-American Affairs. Holland flew in yesterday for a three-day visit. He is on a Latin-American tour.

Reception for Official.

United States Ambassador Albert F. Nufer gave a reception for Holland last night. Guests included Aramburu, Vice President Isaac Rojas and other high Argentine officials. Aramburu and Holland sat on a couch for an earnest half-hour private talk.

Holland, who is accompanied by Samuel Waugh, president of the United States Export-Import Bank, planned to confer today with Dr. Paul Prebisch, the Government's economic adviser. The topic undoubtedly would be possible United States economic aid for the new Argentine government, which has inherited many financial problems left by Peron.

The new government is doing its utmost to make a good impression on United States public opinion—often flouted by Peron. Aramburu has declared himself and his colleagues ardently democratic and eager for close ties with the United States.

Some leaflets proclaiming "Get out, Mr. Holland" were scattered in Buenos Aires by Argentina's small Communist party as Holland arrived. A few hours later government circles let it be known the authorities were considering outlawing the Communists.

JEFFERSON CITY, Dec. 1 (AP)—Only one new polio case was reported in Missouri last week and it made the infantile paralysis total for the year 259. Seven new cases were reported in the same period last year, when the total was 649.

and here is how he's doing it

Typical of the modern telephone services at your disposal today is the Automatic Answering and Recording Set—designed for business and professional men who don't want to miss important calls while they're out.

Here's how it works. You connect the automatic set when you leave your office. Meanwhile, a customer calls. The "voice" of your answering equipment responds and asks for the message. It is then recorded as given and safely kept for you until your return. Simple—and easy to use. And indispensable for keeping an eye—or more accurately, an ear—out for messages in your absence.

This equipment is available in various message capacities. The cost is lower than you would expect. Why not call the Telephone Business Office for complete details? An Answering Set can give you peace of mind and save messages you'd otherwise lose.

URUGUAYANS COMING TO PROTEST U.S. DUTY

Chief Executive Was Invited by Eisenhower; Opposing Wooltop Surcharge.

MONTEVIDEO, Dec. 1 (AP)—The United States will be host next week to the Chief Executive of Uruguay, one of the most democratic countries in the Western Hemisphere.

He is Luis Batlle Berres (Batt'ye'eh Behr'res).

He says, half jokingly, that he is going to the United States—at President Eisenhower's invitation—in a "fighting mood." He put up his fists, in a boxing stance, and remarked he was training hard.

Battle Berres says he will carry on in Washington, Boston and Chicago a Uruguayan campaign against trade conditions this country regards as discriminatory. He also will discuss other economic subjects, including possibly some kind of loan to help this nation of 2,500,000 out of its present doldrums.

Bringing Two Associates.

Both friends and political foes will accompany Battle Berres. He will travel in a United States Navy plane leaving here Sunday, along with his wife, Matilda, a native of Argentina. He also is taking along Dr. Armando Malet, finance minister, and Julio Lacarte Muro, ambassador to Bolivia and a keen student of trade questions.

Battle Berres is not the President of Uruguay. He is "President of the National Council of Government," this country's Swiss-like version of the executive branch of government. It is a nine-member group—six for the majority party and three for the opposition. The council was created under a constitutional reform in 1951, replacing the "personal president" system.

Battle Berres is an enemy of communism and fascism. He was a congressman at 25. Now 58, he has never been out of politics. He spent three years in exile in Argentina during the Terra dictatorship of the 30s. He owns one of Montevideo's most important broadcasting stations and publishes Accion, an afternoon newspaper. Complaint Against U.S.

When Battle Berres was president, 1946-1950, Uruguay, long a raw wool exporter, turned into an exporter of semi-manufactured wooltops. A favorable exchange rate was given exporters. The United States deemed this an export subsidy and clamped a surcharge on import duties to be paid by Uruguayan shipments. He says this harms Uruguay unduly.

Uruguay has also resented lately what is here called "dumping" of United farm surpluses. Uruguayans say Brazil, for years a regular buyer of Uruguayan wheat and flour, was able to buy 500,000 tons of United States wheat and pay for it in cruzeiros, not dollars, and at a very low rate.

Television Sets
Still Uncertain.

TELEVISION sets are greatly improved. The industry has made forward strides in recent years, but even today a set is likely to fail at the wrong moment. So to be sure to see an important boxing match, you must be at ringside.

Everything went smoothly with the set one group was watching as Carmen Basilio blasted Tony De Marco out of the picture in the twelfth round at Boston last night to retain his welterweight championship. Everything was smooth with the set, that is, until the eighth or ninth round when, after each commercial, a dizzy pattern danced across the screen blotting out the fight.

Each time, however, the hostess manager, right the trouble, but when the twelfth round started and you could hear the crowd roar as Basilio won the fight, there was just no correcting the screen.

Through that tumultuous minute, 54 seconds you could hear the announcer telling what was happening, but all you could see was a crazy pattern of lines until it was adjusted as De Marco lay flat on his back and Basilio danced about the ring, happy with the victory. It was bitter for Tony as he was ahead on the three cards of the officials and others through 11 rounds.

It was a surprise that these two young men could duplicate their great fight of last June in Syracuse, where Basilio took the 15-round title from Tony in the same round as in their second meeting, the time being only two seconds shorter.

Rematches frequently turn out to be duels. Not so with this one. De Marco started out as though he would fight a more careful bout than he did the first time when he bored into Basilio, ignoring punishment himself to land his blows.

Seventh Almost Was Lucky for Tony.

TONY tried to stand off and punch at Basilio, where the effect of his efforts was greater and where he could stay away from the body punishment which the champion deals out when he gets close to a foe.

The Boston had did well, too, holding the champion even through six rounds, then making his big bid for a victory in the seventh when he knocked Basilio rubber-legged into a corner.

Carmen was in bad shape and it appeared that if Tony could land one more solid punch he would punch a man away. So in this, De Marco's home-town crowd went wild, pulling for their boy to win back the crown he had held so briefly earlier this year.

But the eager champion managed to stay out of harm's way for the rest of the round and his remarkable recuperative powers sent him to the ring in the eighth round in pretty good condition. He was not dazed, but his mind was sufficiently clear and his reflexes good enough to keep De Marco from blasting him again.

At the end of the eighth it appeared that even De Marco knew that he had failed and that it was just a question of time until Basilio would get to him.

Champion Takes Charge.

THE champion started to take charge in the ninth as he got close to Tony and almost tore his body apart with a savage attack. De Marco was just not strong enough to push Basilio away as he did earlier.

Tony went steadily downhill through the tenth and eleventh at the end of which he walked wearily and unsteadily back to his corner, seemingly knowing that he just was not match for this rugged, older fighter from Canastota, New York.

And the end came in the twelfth just as it had done in June in Syracuse.

At the time of the first fight De Marco's manager was severely criticized in Boston for permitting Tony's first title defense, after his whopping victory over Johnny Saxton, to be held any place except his home town. Ordinarily it is the champion's privilege to name the spot for his first defense, at least.

It was held that De Marco was sticking his neck out to go to Syracuse, but Basilio proved otherwise then and again in Boston as he stopped the rugged Tony each time.

Basilio's iron physique is his greatest asset and he really gets into condition for a fight. His ability to absorb punishment and come back fighting is also remarkable.

After the first bout, in which Basilio took almost as much as De Marco, five days later in New York the champion's face bore few marks of the battle, so quickly had the healed and bruises disappeared.

It will take some time though before Basilio is ready to go through with his contract to fight Saxton. The 60-day period during which Saxton and Basilio are to meet likely will be extended.

After a victory like the second one over De Marco, the champion will need plenty of rest before he's fit to take on another tough opponent and Saxton is sitting pretty as the two fights with De Marco took a great deal out of Basilio and softened him some for Saxton.

BASILIO HURTS HAND IN T.K.O. OF DE MARCO

CHAMP HAS A CLOSE CALL IN 7TH, STOPS TONY IN 12TH

Fight Figures

BOSTON, Dec. 1 (AP)—Financial facts and figures on last night's Basilio-De Marco welterweight title bout: (all figures unofficial.)
Gross gate—$171,000.
Radio-television receipts—$50,000.
Basilio's 40 per cent of net—$31,400.
De Marco's 20 per cent of net—$15,700.
Basilio's total purse—$47,100.
De Marco's total purse—$23,550.

BOSTON, Dec. 1 (AP)—Carmen Basilio, the invincible welterweight champion, looked forward to Johnny Saxton today while nursing a sore left hand he acquired in his methodical-ripping destruction of rugged Tony De Marco.

Basilio, the 28-year-old Canastota, N.Y., gamster, rallied from De Marco's stinging punches last night to repeat his June technical knockout of the Boston challenger in the twelfth round.

The time was 1:54—just two seconds longer than it had taken him to stop Saxton six months earlier. Both fighters weighed 145½ for the nationally televised title scrap at Boston Garden.

Hand Hurt in Second.

After he had knocked down De Marco for an eight count with a smashing right to the jaw, then flattened him for good with withering combinations in his good luck twelfth, Basilio revealed he had hurt his left hand in the second round.

That sore hand may make the patient Saxton wait even longer for his title shot. Saxton, who lost the championship to De Marco here April 1, waived his contract return-but priority for both of the Basilio-De Marco fighting matches. The contract for the latest match called for the winner to meet Saxton within 60 days.

If he had his way, the irrepressible Basilio would take on the Philadelphia boy tomorrow, but the Philadelphia boy held in a bucket of ice water in his dressing room after last night's brawl may delay proceedings. The hand was to be X-rayed today.

"I'll have to wait and see how the hand feels," Carmen said.

How did he feel about Saxton?

"I just fought a tough fight," Basilio replied. "Saxton is tough. They're all tough. I have to fight Saxton, I want to fight him. And I'm gonna win."

Jim Norris, president of the International Boxing Club, said San Francisco, Miami, Chicago and Syracuse are the cities being considered for the Basilio-Saxton fight. The hitch in the Syracuse proposal, a natural for Carmen's home territory and a guaranteed sellout, is that Saxton's manager, Blinky Palermo, has no license in New York and not much chance of getting one.

A near capacity crowd of 13,373 paid a local record of $171,000 to watch what amounted to two fights in one last night.

De Marco, calling on his long range power, took charge in the early rounds and had Basilio wobbling into his corner in the seventh round. It took a near superhuman effort by the ex-Marine from upper New York state to keep from going down for the second time in his professional career.

After he survived the staggering left hook, Basilio grew stronger and unleashed a battering body attack on a weary De Marco tiring just as he had done in punching himself out last June.

De Marco was ahead in rounds on all the officials' cards. Referee Mel Manning had it 6-3-2 on rounds for Tony. Judge Joe Santapio 6-4-1 and Judge Joe Santopio 7-4. The Associated Press had it 5-4-2 for De Marco.

"After the fifth round I knew De Marco would run out of gas," Basilio said afterward. "It was just a question of time."

But his corner was not as confident when Carmen came reeling toward them from De Marco's all-out, seventh-round bombing.

"We yelled 'take an eight count,'" Co-manager Johnny DeJohnny revealed. "When Carmen got back to the corner we asked 'why didn't you go down like we said?' Carmen said 'Why? I wasn't hurt. I knew what I was doing.'"

That summed up the fight. On the defensive, going for the kill, the former onion farmer with the jutting jaw and legs of steel knew what he was doing. When De Marco began missing his long shots in the eighth round, Basilio invited Tony to come inside. Tony moved in where he was no match for Basilio—a rib-softening specialist.

Fifteenth Straight Victory.
In making a comparison with the previous scrap, Basilio said: "De Marco wasn't punching as hard this time as in the first fight. But he was tougher this time. He's a durable kid. But I thought I fought a better fight than before."

The result marked the fifteenth straight bout in which Basilio has gone unbeaten over a 26-month span. Kid Gavilan was the last man to whip Carmen Sept. 18, 1953.

"He just ran out of gas," De Marco's manager, Bobby Agrippino, said of the chunky 23-year-old who had a 70-day grip on the championship from April 1 to June 18.

Basilio, winning his forty-eighth fight against 11 losses, received $74,490 for his 40 per cent of the gate plus a radio-television slice. De Marco, whose record is 41-6-1, got $37,245.

Dramatic Finish of Title Bout

Pettit Keys Hawks Again, Lakers Lose In Touch-Go Finish

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.
ROCHESTER, N.Y., Dec. 1.—If Coach William (Red) Holzman can keep Bob Pettit from running out of gas, St. Louis's hustling Hawks should have less trouble than was feared on the remainder of their rugged four-game trip.

Pettit was the standout in a furious final period against the Minneapolis Lakers last night as the Hawks whipped the one-time N.B.A. rulers, 99-97, before a gathering of 1984 in Rochester's new multimillion dollar war memorial building. It was the first N.B.A. double bill held here. Wintny weather and a chance to get a TV look at the world welterweight championship kept the crowd down.

The Hawks entrained immediately after the program for Philadelphia, where they meet the star-studded Warriors tonight. Tomorrow they'll be in Boston against the always formidable Celtics and Saturday to play the Royals. They play Boston at St. Louis next Tuesday as part of a double-header.

Now about this running out of gas on the part of Pettit. The big 6-9 former L.S.U. star is at his best when rested. Tuesday night he used up a lot of "rest" when he poured 40 points through the hoops as St. Louis beat Philly.

Last night when the Lakers and Hawks squared off for the opening whistle, Pettit was watching from the bench as per Holzman's instructions. The Hawks whipped a 26-23 period lead and in went Pettit. You could see the difference. The Hawks went out in front by 56-46 at the half with Bob Harrison, Al Ferrari and Jack Stephens coming in for their share of laurels.

The Hawks held the 15-foot tag till late in the third period when little Slater (Dugie) Martin began his shenanigans. Martin almost single-handedly brought the Lakers to within one point, 69-68, late in the fourth frame. At this point Pettit, who had had more rest on the bench, ripped in three buckets.

It seemed from there before Martin cashed a pair of free throws, but Alex Hannum's one-for-two from the 15-foot mark neutralized one and it was 98-95. Holzman gave the word not to commit any personal, as only 10 seconds showed on the clock. Whitey Skoog was permitted to dash unhampered in for a shot and his layup made it 98-97.

A lot of action was crammed into those final seconds. Ed Kalafat of the Lakers and Har-

Gullion's 25th Year As a College Coach

BLAIR GULLION will begin his twenty-fifth year of college coaching when Washington University's Bears open their 1955-56 basketball season tomorrow night at the Field House against South Dakota. Game time is 8:15.
Gullion, who began college coaching in 1927 at Earlham, subsequently was headmaster at Tennessee, Cornell and Connecticut before coming to Washington U. His all-time record is 221 victories, 168 defeats.

Bonus Rule To Stay As Is, Minors Vote

COLUMBUS, O., Dec. 1 (UP).—The minor leagues today voted down all proposals to change the baseball bonus rule.

That means that the present rule which places two-year restrictions on all players who are paid more than $4000 for signing a contract, will continue in effect.

There had been proposals to install a rule whereby all bonus players would be subject to unrestricted draft after one season in the minors.

The major leagues will act upon the same legislation at their meetings in Chicago next week, but they cannot change the bonus rule for 1956 because both the majors and minors must act in concert on all such legislation.

Under the bonus rule, as it now stands, every player signed for more than $4000, such as Al Kalita of the Tigers, Frank Leja and Tom Carroll of the Yankees, Paul Giel and Joey Amalfitano of the Giants, Sandy Koufax of the Dodgers and various others are frozen to major league rosters for a two-year period.

They cannot be optioned to a minor league club, for if that occurs they become subject to selection in the draft.

The proposal by Gabe Paul of the Cincinnati Redlegs to make all bonus players subject to unrestricted draft after one season in the minors was defeated by a voice vote.

The Detroit Tigers, who had sought to have all bonus restrictions wiped off the books, also was voted down by voice vote.

The minors adopted unanimously a proposal to set up a committee to negotiate a brand new major-minor league agreement. That proposal probably is destined for failure because the majors reportedly will not act favorably on it next week.

Joe Todd to Be a Two-Spot Man In Move to Boost Billiken Punch

By Robert Morrison
Joe Todd, the active Billiken junior who was fourth best as a point producer as a back-line player in St. Louis U. basketball last season, was slated for both front and back line duty as the Bills finished preparations for their new campaign starting here Saturday.

The double duty assignment was made by Coach Eddie Hickey as a means of keeping more speed and scoring potential in the St. Louis team which faces Louisiana Tech in the first game. In recent years the Billiken coach has leaned heavily on the ability of his top men to interchange positions and he has made this move again when he found that some of the squadmen are not coming along as rapidly as he might have hoped. In fact, Hickey said, the freshman group of last year has produced the slimmest group of sophomore prospects the coach has had here. One soph, however, is shaping up as a dependable. That is Jack Mimitz, a six-foot-three scorer who will work as a leading reserve in the forward line. "By shifting Todd (a regular forward with Capt. Jim McLaughlin) to the backline on occasion, Mimitz thus becomes truly a sixth man in our first line of strength," Hickey said. Louisiana Tech, which opens the season tonight against Arkansas Tech, was co-champion in the Gulf States Conference last season but has lost from that team its two top scorers, three starters and four

Michigan Is No. 1 in Country

NEW YORK, Dec. 1 (UP)—College football attendance rose 2.7 percent nationally this year despite a 9.9 percent drop in the East, where snow and rain dampened the enthusiasm of all but the hardiest old grads. The United Press's annual survey of home attendance at 123 colleges disclosed that 13,311,380 fans turned out for 578 games this year, compared to 12,961,599 in 1955 games last season. The average attendance per game was 23,030 in 1955 against 22,136 in 1954.

The West showed the greatest gain—12.1 per cent over 1954—and attendance was up 10.3 per cent in the South. The Midlands reported a 5.6 per cent rise. The Southwest was up 3.6 per cent and the Midwest gained 0.6 per cent. That left only the East and Rocky Mountain reporting decreases and in the Rockies' case the figure was based on fewer games played than in 1954. (The Missouri Valley and Big Seven area comprises the Midlands.)

Outside of the East, 47 of 88 colleges surveyed reported gains. In the East, however, 24 of 35 colleges reported losses and almost all noted that the weather had been the worst in years.

The Midwest, as usual, reported the largest total attendance—3,522,121—and the largest average per game—39,468. In addition, that football-conscious section produced a new national leader in Michigan, which drew 552,993 fans in seven home games.

Ohio State, the national leader in 1954, ranked second this year with 490,400 in six games while Southern California was third with 465,971 in seven games. Other colleges to top 250,000 were Miami (Fla.), Minnesota, Wisconsin, Rice, Stanford and U.C.L.A.

Missouri U., despite a poor season in which the Tigers drew only 5200 fewer, a total of 119,520 for five contests at Columbia, Illinois, meanwhile, after drawing 275,786 at Champaign for five games in '54, attracted 209,682 this year in four home dates.

SEATTLE, Dec. 1 (AP)—There are two sides even to an effigy and the proof was hanging today from the flagpole outside the University of Washington library. The dangling mannikin represented Coach Johnny (Cowboy) Cherberg, who has been faced with a revolt among his football players.

A sign on one side of the effigy read: "Hang John." And on the other side was a sign saying "Hang tough, Cowboy."

Deadline Passes, Santee in Good Graces of AAU

Screening Urged for Promoters

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Dec. 1 (AP)—A crackdown on sports promoters by the Amateur Athletic Union was talked in AAU convention corridors today as an offshoot of the Wes Santee case.

Santee, this country's Mr. Mile—its best current bet to crack the four-minute mile—got by a big hurdle yesterday in his hopes to remain in run-for-fun company.

The deadline passed for challenging his reinstatement to the good graces of the A.A.U. after a short suspension. He can only hope now that some foreign country won't ask the International Amateur Federation to disqualify him.

Suspension Rescinded. Santee was suspended by his local registration board for accepting more expense money than the A.A.U. allows when he ran on the West Coast last spring. The Missouri Valley Association of the A.A.U. rescinded the suspension.

Without mentioning the case of the swift Kansan specifically, Louis G. Wilke, A.A.U. president, said in an interview:

"Through our district registration committees we are going to have to screen promoters more thoroughly before granting them the privilege of presenting events bearing the approval of the A.A.U."

"Altogether too often we are faced with the unpleasant task of ruling on the eligibility of an individual athlete who is reported to have accepted too much expense money."

He pointed out that such rulings affect only the athlete, adding: "The men who caused the kid to lose his eligibility go unchallenged. I say let every district registration board double check every sponsor and hold him directly responsible for any infraction of our rules regarding expense money."

The A.A.U. limits amateur athletes' expenses to $12 a day. Too much money for athletes was just one problem of the A.A.U. as it opened its sixty-eighth annual meeting. The question of raising big sums to transport, feed and clothe them for next year's Olympics was another.

How to raise a $400,000 Olympic fund was due to come up for discussion and will have to be settled before the convention adjourns Sunday.

Also billed for a busy four days by the 450 delegates are sundry other subjects—where to hold the championship events leading up to the Olympics, for example. The A.A.U. rules over simon-pure competitors in 19 sports.

The first decision of consequence came out of yesterday's pre-conference meeting of the Olympic wrestling committee. It decided the United States should send a Greco-Roman wrestling team to the world-wide competition for the first time. In that sport, the grapplers are limited to holds above the waist.

James Kelley of the University of Minnesota was named head coach of the U. S. Olympic track and field team. The track

"DRINKING and DRIVING DO NOT MIX"

THIS STATEMENT may seem to work directly against our self-interest. But actually it does not.

It is very much to our self-interest to see that the privilege of drinking is not abused. It is to our interest to see that liquor is consumed as it should be consumed. Whiskey is a luxury and should be treated as such. When taken moderately... with a true appreciation of its taste, bouquet and character, fine whiskey brings a sense of friendliness and well-being to social gatherings. But neither whiskey nor any other alcoholic liquor has any place at the wheel of an automobile. Drinking and driving do not mix.

This conviction must be shared by everyone who reads the newspapers and by every thinking person who drives a car.

Therefore, we invite you—in the interest of public safety—to join us in the crusade for safer, saner driving.

If you expect to be at the wheel of a motor car, we say to you: Think before you drink! Don't drink before you drive!

Progress in Teaching About Conservation

By Leonard Hall

These "teacher workshops" really amount to one-day training sessions in all aspects of resource conservation including methods for awakening interest on the part of students at every age level. They are now being held with fair regularity in many Ozark and Ozark border counties—and perhaps in those north of the Missouri river, as well, although we happen not to have attended any so far away from home. The meetings are always arranged by the county superintendent of schools with full co-operation of the Conservation Commission and other resource agencies. Generally it is the rural teachers who take part although sometimes all teachers in the county are included.

AT POPLAR BLUFF, as at most of the workshops I've attended, representatives of several agencies took part and talked about their particular work, its importance and the ways in which some knowledge of this importance might be imparted to youngsters. Thus there may be the county extension agent, the conservation agent, technicians of the Soil Conservation Service, foresters from state and federal services. My own task is generally to define the over-all problem of achieving good use of our natural resources—a problem which has ethical as well as economic implications—and show that it can only be solved through education. At the end of the day, the meeting is usually summed up by Dr. O. C. Capps, director of education for the Conservation Commission.

WE READ A GOOD DEAL, nowadays, about various shortcomings in the field of public education. And there is no doubt that these exist, especially when one realizes that most colleges and universities are forced to teach such subjects as reading and writing, before some students are able to proceed with the regular curriculum. On the other hand, there are areas in which tremendous progress is being made in public education—and one of these is in the teaching of conservation. As an example of this, there recently came to us the "Conservation Handbook," written and edited by the National Association of Biology Teachers and published as a joint project with the American Nature Association. This book is the result of a three-year conservation project developed and carried out by the biology teachers under the leadership of Dr. Richard Weaver of the University of Michigan. And it is exactly what the title says—a manual designed to help teachers in primary and secondary schools make a start in this vitally important field of education.

IN ANSWERING THE QUESTION, "Why conservation?" the introduction of the Handbook states: "We must feel an obligation to generations yet unborn to leave this earth as liberally furnished with resources as we ourselves inherited it." Obviously, this is a matter which has far more to do with morality—with the basic, underlying philosophy of living—than it has with economics; and as such it has clearly to do with education which helps to form the "mores" of each succeeding generation. Following this in the text are many excellent basic conservation concepts: that man is part of the natural world which includes the resources for human sustenance and betterment—and that his well-being depends largely on wise management of this natural wealth; that many resources are limited and cannot be replaced—while others are renewable and will last indefinitely if wisely husbanded; that young people must learn to establish their position in the calendar of the earth's history—understanding the causes of eroded hills and barren land as well as the esthetics of "nature in balance."

THE METHOD of the Handbook is to set up objectives and then show through actual examples of good teaching how these can be accomplished. And its scope is particularly broad, illustrated by the chapter headings: How Can I Start Teaching Conservation and Resources Use; How and Where Can I Get Teaching Help; What Can I Do in the Classroom; How Can I Extend Conservation Teaching to Other Parts of the School and the Community; How Use the School Grounds; How Use the Community; How Use the Outdoors; How Use the Land; How Use the Water; How Use the Air; How Use the Sun; How Use the Soil; How Use the Fossils; How Use the Plants; How Use the Animals; How Use the Universe.

PERHAPS IT ISN'T FAIR to boast about the progress made in conservation teaching in the St. Louis community, but we are particularly conscious of this because of the work done by our good friend Rex Conyers of Senior High School in University City. Having a natural curiosity to see how well we were doing and also knowing that Rex was one of a great many teachers who co-operated with Dr. Weaver on the project, I turned to the index and looked up "University City Public Schools and University City Senior High School." Nor was I much surprised to find a total of 26 project references, more than for any other school, university or conservation in the United States. Many of these projects are familiar to St. Louisans through the annual Science Fair. And one of them, a very outstanding bird-banding study by Lester Newman, was selected several years ago as one of 13 science exhibits from schools in the United States to travel through the schools of all South American countries under UNESCO sponsorship. The whole job being done in the University City Schools is so outstanding, however, that it is perhaps unfair to single out any one project for special recognition.

Try and Stop Me

DURING Malenkov's abortive campaign to provide more consumer goods for the Russian people, a farmer—fed up with empty promises—had the nerve to demand in an open meeting, "Where is the white flour and the new shoes they have been promising?"

"What's your name?" countered the commissar. "Petrovsky," said the fox farmer.

"Okay, Comrade, I will answer your question at our next open meeting."

The next meeting had scarcely gotten underway when the farmer's voice was heard. "I know," said the commissar. "You want to know what's happened to the white flour and the new shoes."

"No, Comrade," was the reply. "I want to know what's happened to Comrade Petrovsky?"

There's a Tradition to Plum Pudding

The Encyclopedia Britannica Even Prints the Recipe—Here's How

By Hoyt Alden

THE plum pudding was a standard Christmas dessert long before fruit cake was ever heard of. It started in England and is said to go back to the days of George I, who lived from 1660 to 1727. Through the years the recipe, so far as the British are concerned, has become set. In fact, the Encyclopedia Britannica prints a recipe for it, whose ingredients, they point out, are accepted as standard throughout the empire. In other words, if it isn't made that way, it isn't British.

Plum puddings, like fruit cakes, may be made well in advance of the holidays. In fact, they improve with age. The English hang them up in a cool dry place in the sack in which they are boiled, and then boil them again for a couple of hours when needed.

A plum pudding isn't hard to make, but it does take time. There are a lot of ingredients to be brought together and prepared, they have to stand for 12 hours before the actual mixing, and then the pudding has to steam for six hours. By making the pudding a week or more before Christmas, you'll not only have it out of the way, but you'll have a better pudding.

The old English way of cooking the pudding is to wrap it in a cloth and boil it. A better job can be done, however, by steaming it in a pudding mold. If you don't have a pudding mold, you can make the pudding in ordinary tin cans, well cleaned, and sealed at the top with tightly tied waxed paper.

YOU will need a big mixing bowl to start with. Into it goes a cup of cooked, pitted and cut-up prunes, a cup of seedless raisins, a cup of dried currants, a fourth of a cup of diced, candied citron, a fourth of a cup of chopped candied cherries, a fourth of a cup of chopped candied lemon peel, a fourth of a cup of chopped candied orange peel, and a fourth of a cup of blanched and chopped almonds. These have been toasted but not salted.

Now add a cup of sifted flour, a cup of sugar, a cup of dry bread crumbs and two and a half cups of finely chopped beef suet.

Mix everything up, and then

IN FACT, THE ENCYCLOPEDIA BRITANNICA PRINTS A RECIPE FOR IT.

In a separate bowl beat four eggs until they're frothy. To the eggs add a scant three-fourths of a cup of milk, and a wineglass of brandy. Sherry will do. Mix this with all the rest of the stuff, cover the bowl and stick it in the refrigerator overnight.

When you're ready to cook, butter the mold or whatever receptacle you're going to use and butter it well. Don't fill a mold more than three-quarters full. Be sure that it's covered tight.

Now put the container on a wire rack inside of a larger container and put enough water around it to come about halfway up the mold. Bring it to a boil, and then keep it boiling gently for six hours. The outside container should be kept covered also. If the water boils down, add some more, but don't let it boil over the top of the mold.

When the time is up, take the lid off the mold, turn a platter upside down on it, and then invert the whole business. The pudding should come out nicely. If you want to store it, leave it in the mold and put it in the refrigerator. When you get ready to serve it, butter the lid again, fasten it, and put the mold on a rack in about three inches of water. It will take a couple of hours to reheat all the way through. If you want to reheat just a small amount, use the top of the double boiler.

WHEN you are ready to serve the pudding, have two things ready, brandy and a generous supply of hard sauce.

To make the latter, put six tablespoons of butter in a big bowl and work it with a spoon until it's creamy. Then gradually work in a cup of confectioner's sugar. When it's soft and creamy, add a teaspoon of vanilla and work that in. Keep it in the refrigerator until you're ready to use it. But before you serve it let it stand at room temperature a half hour or so to soften up.

Okay, everyone's ready now for the pudding. Pour two generous jiggers of good brandy over it. Touch a match to the spot where you poured the brandy, and when it blazes up, carry it to the table.

ON the heels of our recipes for chestnut and oyster dressing, we have had requests for other types, notably sausage stuffing. All right:

Break up enough stale bread to fill two cups and put it in a mixing bowl. For sausage dressing you use no butter because the sausage supplies enough grease. Put three-fourths a cup of mashed sausage meat with the bread.

Cut up an onion and saute it in butter and add it to the mixture. Season with a fourth of a teaspoon of salt and an eighth of a teaspoon of pepper. Don't use any sage or other seasoning, because there is enough in the sausage. This applies also to poultry seasoning.

Mix it all well and while you're turning it pour on a half cup (depending on how wet or dry you like your dressing) of warm stock. Then finally stir in one raw egg.

THERE are a lot of other types of dressing, and one which will bear mention is mushroom dressing. You can use the recipe above, but use only salt and pepper to season. No onion, sage or poultry seasoning. Add a cup of sautéed and sliced mushrooms and chopped hard-boiled eggs. If it isn't moist enough, use a little more stock. It's delicious.

When stuffing any bird, sprinkle the inside and outside well with salt first. Fill the neck cavity first, then the body. If you want to put one type in one cavity and another in the other, pack the stuffing closely, and close both cavities securely.

Soup Trick

Try this trick for your soup kettle. Put large beef knuckles (cracked) and marrow-filled bones in a pan with your favorite seasonings and sear quickly in a very hot (450 degrees) oven. When added to the soup, they'll give fine flavor and color.

Notes On Asphalt Tile.

IN our travels back and forth to nowhere in particular we've noticed a good many homes with asphalt tile floors. Now this is a moderately new product as things go and a lot of people who walk on asphalt tile daily don't understand much about it. Here are a few random facts that may be of help to you, if you happen to walk on asphalt tile.

Asphalt tile becomes soft when heated. If you live in a home heated with a radiant floor slab and if the slab is covered with asphalt tile, you may notice that the legs of furniture easily dent the tile. The way to overcome this little difficulty is to equip each piece of your furniture with some wide castors so that the weight is distributed over a large area of the tile.

Also, don't leave heavy pieces of furniture sitting in the exact same spot. Move them a bit from time to time so that the legs don't sink too deep into the soft tile.

In some homes the heating system is poorly adjusted and

In Hollywood

By Sheila Graham

HOLLYWOOD.

THE new Broadway glamour girl, Jayne Mansfield, has been approached to star in the Jean Harlow movie biography. Jayne, who went from obscurity in Hollywood to New York stardom, in "Will Success Spoil Rock Hunter?" not only has the same brand of Harlow oomph, but resembles her. . . . Gregory Peck's mother is visiting him from the East. And it's my hunch she'll stay until after his marriage to Veronique Passani. . . . Marilyn Monroe's biggest booster is Lee Strasberg of Ella Kazan's acting school. Says her acting has improved 1000 per cent. I'm willing to be convinced. It's been a year since she toiled in Hollywood.

This is interesting: Frank Sinatra says he never argues with the press if the story is true. . . . Moira Shearer is playing Audrey Hepburn's role in "Ondine," now touring the English provinces. But I'd rather see her dance any day. . . . And I'd like to see the two Academy Award winners, Marlon Brando and Grace Kelly, teamed in a picture. Warners feels the same way—they say they'll wait until doomsday to land them for "Band of Angels."

THE SADDEST GIRL in town—Dana Wynter, who had thought her "Sixth of June" would be made in Europe instead of right here. . . . Hollywood's Rudy Mate will direct Ingrid Bergman's British picture, "Up at the Villa," from a story by Somerset Maugham. . . . Edmund O'Brien has a date in Athens next summer to star with Katina Paxinou in Sophocles' play, "Oedipus Rex." . . . British thespians Ann Todd and Robert Morley have a TV date in New York for "Edward My Son"—Morley's London stage hit.

The record in fan devotion—Ann Gower, a typist, who owns 10,000 Doris Day photographs, 40 of Doris's records. She has seen every one of Doris's pictures 30 times, and she lost a job because she took time out to see a Day movie.

ROD STEIGER, the fine heavy in "Oklahoma," earned $22,000 in 1954. It's more than $100,000 so far this year—with $40,000 alone for "The Harder They Fall." It pays to be bad in the movies.

Far from being defunct, Metro's "Ben Hur" revival is still very much on, with 20 artists making sketches. The only thing not sure is where to make it. The Rome location trip is considered too costly.

When Mario Lanza is really emoting, they close his "Serenade" set to all visitors. When the set was closed last week it was because Mario was frenziedly tearing the shirt from another player's back. This is the kind of acting that Mario likes best.

One of Groucho Marx's comedy writers is Dr. Ed Tyler. They met when Groucho visited him as a patient, tried to kid him about his profession. But the Doc topped him every time. Groucho finally stopped trying, and signed up the doctor's spare time.

Vivian Matrone's director of "Zarak Kahn," Terence Young, in Africa, doesn't believe in taking chances. He has a doctor on the outdoor sets and a boy follows him with an open umbrella. But in spite of all the strange bugs and diseases, Africa is becoming more and more fashionable for filming.

'Going Along'

By Angelo Patri

FATHERS and mothers have been bothered by the seemingly changing of standards of behavior these past few years. Conduct that in their youth would have been frowned down and out seems to be accepted common practice. I say "seems" for fundamentally, sound character has not been changed.

There are signs that this day of slackness in morals and manners is about to pass. Let's hope it will. The young people in secondary schools need to consider their standards of behavior. They are on their way toward personal responsibility for what they think and do, and on their personal decisions their future happiness and success must rest.

WHEN THIS IS POINTED OUT to them, when a father or mother protests about an attitude or an action, it is not unusual for an adolescent to say, "Oh, everybody's doing it. You're so old-fashioned." Well, the Ten Commandments are ancient, but they are as new today as when Moses first announced them, and they can still stand a good bit more wear than they are getting in some places just now.

But will this young person please stop long enough to ask himself whether he would be a leader or a follower. Will he ask himself, "Am I following another's lead, doing no thinking and making no decisions for myself but waiting to be told what to do and where to go?" It is important to each young man and each young woman to look at this situation and see whether he is an "Everybody's doing it," personality or an individual with a will and purpose of his own.

"GETTING ALONG with people," is something to ponder on now. What people? Who and what are they and what sort of thing must one do to get along with them? Isn't there a time when one stands up tall and says, "You go your way and I go mine," because one believes in something with all one's heart and soul? There certainly is, and it is high time our young people recognized it and lived accordingly.

Take, for instance, the matter of hard drinking at a party. Few young people are for that, but "going along" seems so essential. A bit of time out to think about it will soon prove it is nothing of the sort. Just say, "No thank you," pleasantly and go on with what you were doing. It's as simple as that. And this matter of late hours and the fast car. That way danger lies. One's neck is precious, isn't it? And one's reputation for sound sense?

Think a little, young people. You're on your own.

"I HAVE heard that there are certain vitamins which will keep the hair from graying. Do you approve of this?"—M.C.D.

Some years ago a great deal was written about vitamins which would keep the hair from turning gray. Unfortunately the publicity was premature, and the vitamins did not have the desired effect. Research is still being done on this problem, but as yet nothing has been produced in the way of vitamins which will retard the graying process.

Busy Career as 'Ham' Radio Operator

Louis Arivello of Brentwood Averages Over 1000 Messages a Month, 80 Per Cent for G.I.s

By Edward Kosmal

CIVILIAN Louis Arivello of Brentwood, by military standards, is over-age, but his home-front record, compiled during the fighting in Korea and since the armistice there, would look good on many a much younger G.I.

There are no medals, only small certificates issued by the American Radio Relay League to bear testimony of his service to members in the armed forces and their families. During 1953 and '54, the 61-year-old Arivello received and relayed more messages (about 80 per cent to and from service men—principally in the Far East) than any other "ham" in Missouri. And in 1952, when Arivello first began his role as a modern-day Mercury in earnest, he was rated No. 2 among hams in the state.

Defining the standings in other terms, Arivello, operator of amateur short wave station WOCP1 for almost 15 years, has received or transmitted 37,450 messages during the past three years, a monthly average of 1040.

A lot of work?

"Well, yes," he admits, "it is time-consuming. Actually, my weekday schedule starts at 6:45 a.m. at which time I regularly contact a ham in Des Moines to relay messages for his area which I had received the previous evening from the Marine Recruiting Base in San Diego, Camp Pendleton in California and other points. And at 7 o'clock, I participate in a Midwest net."

THEN Arivello signs off and heads for the St. Louis bureau of the Associated Press, where he is maintenance man of teletype, wirephoto and facsimile equipment.

A lion's share of messages filtering through WOCP1, he explains, are the result of a regular five-day-a-week schedule with the Marine Base in San Diego and Camp Pendleton, an arrangement more than three years duration.

After a day at the office, it's back to home and ham.

"At 4:45 p.m.," he says, "I'm in contact with San Diego, then at 5 it's Pendleton."

And still his day isn't finished. At 7:45 p.m., Arivello assumes net control on the Trans-Continental Phone Net, which on a busy night may keep him at the microphone until 10 or later. As operator of a net control station, it is his job to facilitate orderly transmission of messages between various points throughout the country.

This daily schedule keeps Arivello tied to the transmitter for three hours or more five days out of the week, not counting the time spent delivering messages to St. Louis area residents.

If an addressee is listed in the telephone book, Lou relays the message by phone, otherwise he resorts to the mails.

The short-wave transmitter, Arivello believes, is far from a has-been—even in a super-sonic era. As proof he cites a "canned" message from a wounded marine in Japan which he relayed to the serviceman's mother in Edwardsville, Ill.

In a canned message, all that is sent via short wave is a code number which the ham translates into one of a score of general communications applicable to usual situations.

Dissatisfied with the vague news from her son, the anxious mother telephoned Arivello with an urgent request for more detailed information. And only 21 minutes after submitting her request, the mother's plea was rewarded with a more explicit, and reassuring, reply.

A World War I veteran himself, Arivello has a sympathetic chuckle for many of the reports of "hardships" that pass through his radio set.

"When asking friends and relatives for money," he ex-

LOUIS ARIVELLO WITH HIS SHORT WAVE RADIO EQUIPMENT IN HIS HOME IN BRENTWOOD. DURING 1953 AND 1954, HE RELAYED MORE MESSAGES THAN ANY OTHER "HAM" OPERATOR IN MISSOURI.

plains, "the servicemen frequently attempt to disguise their financial embarrassment with explanations that 'My records were held up.' 'My wallet has been stolen,' and 'The barracks have burned down.'"

ARIVELLO, understandably, declines to estimate the astronomical number of armed forces barracks that have been reported burned down in the last three years.

Some of the appeals for monetary assistance, however, fall on deaf ears. "One soldier," he recalls, "radioed his mother the following message: 'Send $25. Will give details later.'"

The mother declined to send the money and, instead, asked Lou to relay her succinct sentiments: "Awaiting details and they better be good."

No more was heard from either side, Arivello reports.

At other times, however, there is a far more somber background for Lou's work. In 1952 the tornado which hit Judsonia, Ark., and the Waco, Tex., disaster a short while later supply excellent examples of ham service to a people in distress. The Waco tornado kept Arivello at his radio for eight hours, from 10 p.m. until 6 a.m. After this lengthy tour of emergency duty, he changed clothes and went to work, dropping off the messages he had received during the night at the local Red Cross Chapter.

Many recipients of radio messages acknowledge their gratitude for the service with letters to Arivello, often including a stamp or two to repay mailing costs of the communication. Others request suggestions for a gift the ham could use, but a gesture of this kind is always declined.

Not only does Lou spend many of his waking hours near his 750-watt transmitter, but he even, so to speak, sleeps on the job—his bed is in the same room only a few feet from the controls. Lou, it seems, just naturally goes all out in what ever he does. A perfect illustration of this spirit is the Arivello backyard at 8829 Moritz place.

Right smack in the middle of it is Lou's shortwave antenna, which resembles a Goliath TV aerial. Forty-two feet high, it stands on a telephone pole, has eight elements (three are 32 feet long, five are 16) and is rotated by a propeller pitch motor.

How does his wife take all this?

"I guess she's resigned to it now," Lou smiles.

But Elmyra Arivello has another version. "I think my husband has a very gratifying hobby," she says.

Actually, she puts herself in the role of a silent partner. "Somebody has to take up the slack to create the leisure for Lou," she explains, "so I go ahead and take care of the odds and ends around the house."

And to prove that she is enjoying her role, Mrs. Arivello is quite often at her husband's side as WOCP1 signs off after a busy night.

Why Husband Abandons a Marriage

By Dr. Paul Popenoe

WHAT does a husband expect of his wife, anyway? That's what Mrs. Z. wants to know. She will probably never find out from her own husband because he has just divorced her.

"Mental cruelty," he complained. That doesn't mean anything, Mrs. Z. said. She'd like to know where she fell short. "Why are husbands so often dissatisfied with their wives?" she inquires.

CERTAINLY the reasons are not the same in any two marriages, Mrs. Z., but it's worthwhile considering what some husbands say. The American Institute of Family Relations collected details of more than 500 marriages. Prof. Lewis M. Terman of Stanford University analyzed these histories. Typically, he found the husband complained of the wife that:

Her feelings were hurt too easily, she was too critical, she was nervous or emotional, she managed the income poorly, she restricted him too much, she was quick-tempered and nagged him, or she had poor taste in amusements.

PERHAPS the most sound very cruel to you, Mrs. Z., but many of the difficulties in marriage seem small at times. The trouble is that they accumulate and multiply.

Every wife might well examine that list and see if any one of them applies to her.

Secrets of Charm Hosiery to Fit Your Legs

THE COLOR OF YOUR HOSE SHOULD BE RIGHT FOR YOU.

Do you know that your hosiery can make your legs appear slimmer or curvier, whichever you wish?

If your legs are large, don't wear the lightest stocking you can find. The only thing you want is lightness in weight, for a gossamer stockings chisels the size of the legs. For this reason, they have become the delight of all women.

Hazy shades keep the legs beautifully inconspicuous. If you want to minimize thickness in the ankle area, wear a stocking with a slender, pointed heel. A stocking punctuated with a dark and not too delicate seam also trims the leg.

Seamless stockings fill out the overslim leg.

If you have other figure problems, learn to use color to advantage for your whole costume. Dark colors will seem to make you look smaller and slimmer. Light and bright colors will have the effect of making you look larger. So, to satisfy your great yen for color, choose it in hat, or for a satin fill-in at your neck.

Study fashions featured in style shows and complete costumes featured in newspapers. Until you are sure of your own tastes select one that appeals to you and copy it to the last accessory. Before too long, as you study and experiment . . . add or eliminate, you'll learn what looks best on you and make fewer and fewer expensive mistakes.

My Day

Comment on The World Situation

By Eleanor Roosevelt

NEW YORK.

IN the Sunday Magazine section of the New York Times for Nov. 27 there was an article by Chester Bowles on the present world situation, and I hope it was widely read.

I am convinced that one of our great difficulties in foreign policy today is that for some time past we have taken up individual situations as they occurred.

We have not constantly had in mind the whole world picture and how each action could react on some policy which might change in view of an action in another field. This has led to being completely inflexible and when you are inflexible you cannot bargain successfully.

I THINK our policy at the present should be to make as few firm commitments as possible until we have examined the whole world situation to see something happening in another area might affect the thing we are trying to do at a given moment.

Chester Bowles' article pleases me because he states more clearly and gives more documentation for some of the things I have been trying to say for the past few months.

He feels, for instance, as I do, that we should not have been surprised that nothing came from the meeting of the foreign ministers and he explains the attitude of the Soviet Union at the summit conference.

He feels that we cannot afford to weaken our military position, but that we can afford to strengthen our position in the world by an all-out economic program for Asia and Africa and the Near East. If we had not had the vision and courage to do this in Europe the situation might be very different today.

WE ARE FACED with a greater and more complicated economic program, but if we really mean to fight a Communist world this is the only way to fight it.

Hand in hand with a strong economic program there should be an increase in cultural and spiritual understanding.

The closing line of Chester Bowles' article is a telling one. He hopes that history will not

Martha Carr's OPINION

Dear Martha:
I HAVE a dear friend I have known since our college days but after my marriage 20 years ago I have seen her seldom and we really have nothing in common any more. We do write to each other several times during the year and exchange birthday cards. But ever since I left home we have been sending each other Christmas presents and as she is better off financially than I am, she can afford a more handsome gift. It seems to me a little silly to continue the custom but I don't know what to say to her so that I won't hurt her feelings. I know that Christmas is an especially happy time for her and she gets a great deal of joy out of shopping for others' gifts but I really cannot afford to send her anything except a most modest remembrance and I would like to stop altogether. What can I say to her?
S.R.

Since it is so close to Christmas and she probably has already selected your gift, I don't think you should say anything this year. Go ahead and send her a gift—without comparing the cost of hers and yours—and when you thank her for her present, you might point out very frankly that because of increased responsibilities and demands on your budget you feel you must start cutting down on Christmas spending and you'd like to suggest that since she and you are such good friends and don't need any tangible evidence of your concern for each other that you dispense with the gifts and keep in touch by letter.

Dear Martha:
LAST SUMMER I met a very nice boy and we dated until he and his family moved to another city in the fall. He has written me a few times since then. I would like to see him and I have said in my letters that I thought I might take a trip to his town but he hasn't mentioned it when he answers me. Would it be all right for me to go? I am 19 and he is 25.
MARGIE.

If he really wanted to see you, Margie, he'd asked his mother to invite you to visit the family. I'm afraid he's a lost cause and you'd be guilty of extremely poor taste if you went ahead with your plans. Better concentrate on the boys at home.

IN ANSWER TO Mrs. A.B.: In the case of an elopement, a formal announcement is customarily issued by the bride's parents, always stating the date, year and city where the marriage took place. If the couple has been married in a civil ceremony, only the name of the city or town appears. If it has been a religious ceremony, it is optional whether the church is mentioned.

IN ANSWER TO Puzzled: Gift suggestions for the fifth (wooden) wedding anniversary are salad bowls with forks and spoons, pepper mills, picture frames, cigarette boxes or, as a more elaborate choice, a piece of furniture.

Send today for Martha Carr's free leaflet of prayers for children and grace to be said at table. Please enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope with your request.

What to Wear

By Louise Trescott

DEMANDING young wives and ingenious designers have developed the most attractive maternity clothes on record. Mrs. Young Married asks:

"April is the month I'm expecting my second child. As my little boy, now 3, was born in summer, practically none of my maternity clothes will serve for the winter season.

"Can you list a wardrobe that will keep me so-called well dressed, both at home and at my outside interests? I'd like to look my best and at minimum expense. I'll need a full length coat which must do for both dress and casual wear. My height is 5-2, olive complexion."

AN UNTRIMMED COAT of smooth, dull-surfaced wool, clean cut but not a sporty type, hanging reasonably full from shoulders, will serve admirably for both casual and dressy clothes. Accessories can key it to the mood you desire. Two-piece costumes with adjustable skirts are best and need not be droopy smocks or trite butcher boys. Select costumes in one color as color breaks do nothing for a bulky figure. Choose dull surfaced fabrics as fine wool, winter cottons and some of the many astonishing synthetics.

For activities outside your home I suggest two outfits—one with cardigan neckline which you can revamp with collars in different shapes and sizes in linen, lace, fur and metallic cloth. A wide satin collar is another idea. Let the other dress have the new open round neckline which takes scarfs and chokers so well. If you feel you need a third and dressier costume, consider a two-piece with a low neckline, square or round. Let this be in a dressy fabric as a shirred sheer or pleated chiffon.

FOR HOME WEAR, two cotton outfits for housework and one for quiet evenings in your own living room and one for entertaining there. Vary these, too, as much as possible with accessories.

I suggest one of the new autumn browns as your basic color. Choose the most becoming tone and buy your coat in this, as well as at least two dresses. Then fill in with soft, grayed yellow-greens and beiges. Spark with tomato, brick red and neighboring colors. If your olive complexion is exceptionally clear and smooth, some subdued purples may be becoming. I suggest these colors only for at-home clothes as they do not blend easily with a brown coat. If your skin is a very light olive, some grays, both warm and cool, may be good. Combine grays with your brown coat, if you wish.

Always match gloves to your coat. Contrasting gloves do a thick middle no good. Bags and shoes in blending browns. Select hats and other accessories worn near face. In contrasting colors, using your own judgment in selecting from colors mentioned as becoming.

Social Problems

By Emily Post

"WHEN several people are sitting in a group and one of them is relating a story, or they are in the midst of a discussion, and another person joins the group, it is necessary to tell the new arrival very quickly what the story is about, or the subject of the discussion? I think it is very rude to allow a person to sit in complete ignorance of the conversation. What do you have to say about this?"

It depends how briefly you can explain, but remember going into a long explanation to a new arrival will bore everyone else.

Designing Woman Christmas Wreath of Bows

By Elizabeth Hillyer

AN EASY-TO-MAKE SUGGESTION FOR THE HOLIDAYS.

IT'S all a matter of knowing how to make two gay bows for Christmas packages. Learn how to turn them out beautifully, and it's easy to make the new Christmas wreath.

The wreath is simply a series of pompon bows tied to a circle of cardboard and topped off with another bow, one that's the simplest of all to make. Sketches of both bows guide you, and the wreath can be made of one full one-dollar roll of 34-inch satintone ribbonette and a few feet from another. This leaves 36 feet in the second roll, plenty for packages and the special bows that are sketched at lower right.

LET'S START with the pompon bow. For the wreath there must be 18 of them, each with 24 four-inch loops. The satintone ribbonette is so bright and shining green for the wreath, but it's also used because it's properly crisp and easy to work with. When you make the circle (as at top left of the right hand series of sketches) it needs merely be moistened on the tongue to stick to itself, and thus it holds at both ends.

When all 24 loops are formed, cut off the remainder and flatten the circle at the center between two fingers. Then cut both ends in wedge shapes, as in the second sketch, and tie the loops together at the wedged points with a scrap of the ribbonette slit so it is very narrow. Now, holding a section of the loops in one hand, begin to pull out the loops, and be sure to pull each loop toward you. Pull out all the loops and there's your pompon bow, the actual making easier than it was to describe.

Finish off the wreath with an entirely different bow of wider satintone ribbonette in red. Form a big loop first, then turn the back of the loop under and behind the spot where the two ends meet, as in the sketches at top left. That's all there is to it except tying the bow together. Sprinkle silver or gold glitter on the wreath—it will hold if cement is first brushed onto the loops.

THAT special look of the pompon bows on the packages at right is achieved by very simple tricks. One is called a quilted bow, and for it the ribbonette loops are tied at the center with a square knot of tiny strips of contrasting ribbonette. Old quilts were often tied with yarn in similar effect. The other bow takes polka dots, which are circles cut from the ribbonette and moistened to stick on securely.

Once in A Decade Birthday

By Ruth Millett

WHEN her seventy-first birthday rolled around earlier this year, Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt said she wasn't celebrating it. Furthermore, she said, from here on in she is going to celebrate her birthdays every five years instead of annually.

No doubt many other women getting along in years will decide a birthday every five years is a fine idea and make it their own birthday policy. But wouldn't it be an even better idea if women started at age 20 to celebrate their birthdays just once in every 10 years.

THAT way a woman could think of herself as 20—until she hits 30, as 30 until she hits 40, as 40 until she reaches 50—and so on.

There wouldn't be the annual checkup in the mirror for signs of increasing age, so depressing to a woman. There wouldn't be the yearly consciousness of growing older. Instead there would be a reckoning only once every 10 years.

There would be another decided advantage, too. Women who turn 25 often start thinking of themselves as "getting close to 30." So they "feel 30" several years before they actually hit that milestone.

THE BIRTHDAY every 10 years ought to help a woman avoid feeling a certain age before she gets to it.

Want to try it, girls? All you have to do is announce to your family and friends that from now on your birthdays are going to be 10-year milestones.

Of course, you'll lose a lot of birthday loot that way. But it ought to be worth it to skip those yearly reminders that you are getting older.

It's an Idea

Whether your bathroom is new or old, here is an antidote for monotony. Over the tub, hang several brass or painted wall planters stocked with lacy ferns and trailing vines. Give the room a new vitality and freshness.

Grilled Cheese and Relish Sandwiches

Ingredients: For each sandwich—two slices bread, one slice sharp cheddar cheese, one tablespoon sweet pickle relish, one tablespoon butter (soft). Method: Put the cheese on a slice of bread; spread pickle relish over the other slice and arrange over cheese. Spread top side of sandwich with one-half tablespoon soft butter; brown, butter side down, in hot heavy iron skillet. While this side of sandwich is browning, spread remaining one-half tablespoon butter on upper side of sandwich before turning to brown. Cut in half and serve at once.

"Clever gal,
my Carol!"

I'm tickled pink with the smart way my Carol handles her housework. Take wood floors for instance. Most gals complain about all that scrubbing and waxing. But not my Carol! She cleans and waxes them in one easy operation with Bruce Cleaning Wax. It takes her half the time and a lot less elbow grease. And we've yet to have a guest who hasn't commented on our beautiful wood floors. My Carol and her Bruce Cleaning Wax really make easy work of a hard job. I'm mighty pleased with both of them.

P.S. For lighter waxing on linoleum and wood, Carol uses Bruce Floor Cleaner.

Television Notes and Gossip

ONE of television's top dramatic writers, Rod Serling, wrote the scripts for three major programs this week.

Serling, now gets $5000 a script, but he wasn't always that fortunate. He wrote 40 television plays before he was accepted.

A family whose home life is like a three-ring circus will be pictured in "The Fabulous Sycamores" on KSD-TV at 8:30 tonight. Players will include Cecil Kellaway, Barbara Britton, Joyce Holden in "The Fabulous Sycamores," story of a madcap family who specialize in destruction, deception and dancing.

The network show appearing on the most stations is "December Bride," which is on 174 stations. Some syndicated film shows, however, have a wider coverage.

Zsa Zsa Gabor, Michael Rennie and John Kerr will star in a high comedy of farce in the world of art dealers and connoisseurs in "A Man of Taste" on KWK-TV's "Climax" at 7:30 tonight.

The top 10 advertisers in television spent nearly $13,500,000 on TV in September.

One Hollywood studio alone will have turned out more than 300 half-hour television film shows this year, with a total production value of $9,045,000.

When NBC-TV repeats "Peter Pan" in January, the cast will be the same as in the first performance except for a couple of children who have outgrown their roles. Mary Martin, Cyril Ritchard and former St. Louisian Kathy Nolan are the stars.

CHAPTER ELEVEN

THE long ride through the late summer Missouri night was like a warm blanket to Lisa's nerves. Although she had been only 9 years old when she left, this was her home. Her desire to return had been based on an instinct as deeply rooted as the longing to see her father again. This was her native soil. It was where she belonged. She gave a little sigh and relaxed into the seat beside him. Steve Morton said, "Tired, honey? It isn't much farther."

Lisa patted his arm. "I don't care how far it is, now that I'm with you. I'm not tired. Just relaxing. The last two days were more of a strain than I realized."

He did not question her. In spite of their intimacy, she felt he did not want to hear the details of the quarrel with her mother. He had sent Lisa a telegram and the subject was closed. He didn't want to hear anything about Marna. Probably because it was too painful. After all these years it was like tearing open an old wound you had hoped was healed.

Believing this, his daughter loved him more than ever. She was even prepared to like Diane.

"Tell me about her," Lisa urged. "Your wife. I mean. What's she like? And what shall I call her?"

"You'd better ask her about that. You must understand Diane is not herself just now. It's been a long hot summer and she's been extremely uncomfortable."

Lisa nodded. "Having a baby makes most women feel like that. But when it's over they are so happy they forget it." Her father glanced at her taking his eyes from the road.

"Now what would you know about it?" he teased.

Lisa retorted, "You don't have to be a mother to imagine how it feels."

Steve chuckled appreciatively but his eyes were grave. He knew where Lisa had obtained

Lisa Morton, daughter of Marna, a beautiful blonde who had been married to Steve Morton for three years. Lisa had been born in New York on a spring trip. Her mother had been in the city for a few days before she had been taken to the hospital. Lisa had been born in the city, but her mother had been taken to the hospital. Lisa had been born in the city, but her mother had been taken to the hospital.

her information. Every word of it had been Marna's. She had said it to comfort him 18 years ago before Lisa was born. Their first child. Their only child and now young they had been! It was nothing like this time but it was worse when you were older.

Diane wasn't to blame. But it would soon be over and things would be better again. Meantime he must be patient. That was the least he could do. Yet here he was adding to his wife's distress by bringing his daughter into their home. And from the way Lisa was talking she had every intention of remaining.

Stephen would like nothing better if the situation were normal but under the circumstances what could he do? If only he were on better terms with Marna's old friends one of them might come to the rescue but he never saw them any more except at some meeting or on the street.

He couldn't ask a favor of women who politely ignored his second wife, speaking to her when they saw her, inviting her to large parties but never to those intimate little groups where the "girls" really let down their hair.

Diane resented it and at first he told her it was only a temporary but after all these years things hadn't changed. It was ridiculous but they still called Diane "Mrs. Morton" as if they didn't know her other name.

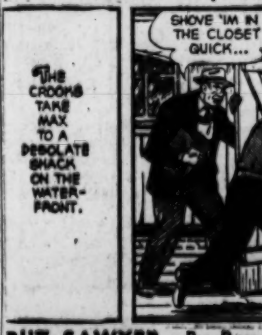

He realized Lisa was talking again. "You're getting sleepy, Daddy. Don't you want me to drive while?"

"It's only a few miles now."

JUNE, the month of Juno, a Roman goddess, is favored for weddings nowadays. In ancient Greece things were different. January was the chief marriage month; it was called "Gamelion" by the Greeks, and they spoke of it as the month of Hera, who protected marriage.

Juno, by the way, was supposed to have about the same powers as the Greek Hera. Nevertheless the Romans gave Juno a month almost half a year away from the Greek month which honored Hera.

Q. What kind of celebration marked a wedding in ancient Athens?

A. The wedding took place in the home of the bride's father. Many guests were invited, and they watched while a lamb or a calf was placed over a fire "as a sacrifice to the gods." That was hardly a sacrifice in a true sense of the word; the animal was eaten by the guests after being well cooked.

A large, flat wedding cake also was served to the guests. The cake was made chiefly from honey and crushed sesame seeds.

During the evening the bride's mother would escort her to a cart or carriage which stood outside the house. With their way lighted by torches, the couple drove slowly to the dwelling which the groom had prepared as a home. Merrily singing songs, the guests marched alongside the vehicle to another feast.

Q. Did Greek women use "make-up" on their faces?

A. Many of them did. They painted their cheeks with red pigment and darkened their eyebrows. Unhappily for them, the colors sometimes failed to remain "fixed." On a hot day, perspiration sometimes caused streaks of red or black to appear on their faces. Sometimes the streaks ran clear down to the chin.
